SINKING OF THE BRITISH STEAMSHIP FALABA—112 LIVES LOST.

The British liner Falaba was the first big passenger steamship sunk in the German submarine war. It was bound for African ports. Among the missing passengers was Leon C. Thresher of Worcester County, Massachusetts, the first American victim of the submarine war.

REMARKABLE PICTURES MADE WHEN SUBMARINE SANK SHIP

The things that happened when the passenger steamer Falaba received its death stroke from a German submarine are today brought home to the reader by pictures, even more vividly than by narrative.

The Falaba, bound from London to the African coast, was torpedoed and sunk in St. George's Channel by one of the Kaiser's underwater boats. This was the first passenger vessel sunk after Germany declared war on England's commerce fleets.

There were 112 men and women lost in the sinking of the Falaba, among whom was Leon Chester Thresher, an American, whose death caused an international complication for the United States.

FEAT WITH THE CAMERA.

Among the Falaba's passengers was an Englishman with a camera, who had the presence of mind and the opportunity to take photographs, tremendously unusual photographs, from the very deck of the sinking liner. These pictures tell the story of modern submarine warfare vividly.

The upper picture shows the scene on board the Falaba a few moments before the submarine fired its deadly torpedo. Passengers wearing lifebelts are waiting to be taken off by the boats. There was no panic. Survivors have spoken highly of the perfect order which prevailed on board.

The lower picture shows the submarine, as seen from the deck of the Falaba before the torpedo was discharged. The black patch is caused by salt water on the camera film.

HOW THE PICTURES WERE MADE.

The way the pictures were taken is romance in itself. The photographer went about the torpedoed Falaba camera in hand, snapping pictures here and there and oblivious of danger. He helped to lower the boats, gave one man his lifebelt, did his best to soothe the women and cheer some of the men, and when there was a moment to spare took photographs.

At the last minute, when the Falaba was keeling over, her funnels almost level with the water, he thought it time to quit, so with his camera in the pocket of his mackintosh, he dropped over the side into the sea and struck out.

He was an hour in the sea before being rescued, part of the time clinging to a plank with another man. Only by the merest chance was he washed up against the side of the trawler Eileen Emma. He was hauled aboard in a semi-conscious condition.

When revived on board the Eileen Emma he felt in the pocket of his mackintosh and found the camera was still there. Although the leather of the camera was still peeled off the roll of exposed films by some fortunate chance was dry and uninjured.

Additional pictures of the Falaba catastrophe will be published in Monday's AMERICAN. One will show the capsizing of one of the Falaba's lifeboats when the torpedo from the German submarine struck the passenger vessel. Passengers hurled into the water are struggling frantically to reach the upturned bottom of the lifeboat. A woman has just secured a precarious grip on the lifeboat's keel, and is clutching for her life.

Another picture will show two lifeboats, successfully lowered and afloat with survivors. Two boats have capsized. There are men drowning in the rough sea. One man has arms extended, apparently throwing them upward in a final death struggle.

These are two of the most remarkable pictures of a marine disaster ever published.

GERMANS CHECK FRENCH ADVANCE

TRANSIT MERGER IS URGED

Striking recommendations for the future development of the transportation systems of metropolitan Boston, embracing the consolidation of trolley, subway and tunnel lines and the electrification of various divisions of the three great railroad companies, feature a remarkable report filed with the Legislature today by the Public Service Commission.

Based on a comprehensive study of improved transportation and glittering with suggestions of broad scope, the report constitutes one of the most

ST. MIHIEL ATTACK IS REPULSED

LONDON, April 10.—Today's official statement by the German War Office says the Kaiser's troops have checked the great French offensive, launched to break the German wedge at St. Nobiel.

A sharp defeat of the French between the heights of the Meuse and the Orne River is claimed by Berlin, although it is admitted that the fighting between the Meuse and the Maselle continues with great violence.

"No engagements have taken place at Fromezey and Coussainville, which the French reported having taken, because both these places are situated far in front of the German lines," says the Berlin report.

"Between the Orne River and the heights of the Meuse a severe defeat was administered to the French. All French attacks were repulsed on Combres Heights; also north of St. Mihiel and on the Ailly-Apremont front as well as near Pfirey, where, in consequence of the heavy French losses, the attacks against our positions have become less violent."

HAND-TO-HAND FIGHTING.

The official statement issued by the French War Office at Paris this afternoon follows:

"There is nothing to add to the communique of last night.

"Supplementary reports made during the night relate that the two attacks which made us masters yesterday of the last German positions at Eparges, were made with the bayonet and resulted in hand-to-hand fighting."

The biggest French army that has yet been concentrated at any one point on the battle front is massed in the Argonne forest and the Woevre district between the Meuse and Moselle rivers, where, despite extremely heavy losses, the French are driving against the German positions in repeated assaults.

These furious onslaughts, which are being carried out under the personal direction of General Joffre, the French

French Ship Is Destroyed by Submarine

By FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

PARIS, April 10.—The French sailing ship Chateaubriand, bound from London to New York with a cargo of chalk, has been torpedoed and sunk in the English Channel, off Barfleur, France, by a German submarine, it was announced by the French Admiralty today.

The crew of twenty-four men was given ten minutes to quit the ship, and all were saved, arriving at Treport after being tossed about in the rough seas for forty-eight hours.

Three torpedoes were fired into the Chateaubriand, and she sank in three minutes.

The Chateaubriand was a steel-hulled ship of 2,300 tons.

Big Water Damage in Haverhill Fire

HAVERHILL, April 10.—The C. K. Fox slipper factory, one of the largest in Haverhill, was badly damaged early today by fire and water. The fire itself did but little damage, but it started the automatic sprinklers and before they could be shut off they had flooded all four floors, doing extensive damage to both machinery and stock. Work was not halted, however, when the 500 employes reported.

Pope Orders Peace Prayer During May

ROME, April 10.—Pope Benedict XV. today ordered his "peace prayer" recited in all Roman Catholic churches throughout the month of May. At the same time the right has been granted to the bishops to interpret the prayer and translate it in such a way that its recital will not offend Catholics of the warring nations.

HELD AT HOSPITAL AS SLAYER

Harry Hines of Cambridge, who was released from Charlestown State Prison on parole the day before last Thanksgiving to eat Thanksgiving dinner with his children, Arthur, four years, and Barbara, two, was taken to Cambridge city courthouse today in a critical condition from burns and smoke inhalation and was held dithout bail until April 20 on a double charge of murder in setting a fire in which his children were burned in their crib last night.

Hines himself had been carried out unconscious from his burning home at 83A Griggs street, Cambridgeport, by police and firemen. His housekeeper, Mrs. Addie Jarvis, was also unconscious when saved. Both were laid on the sidewalk and were revived by Dr. Walter A. Feeley with a police motor and then taken to Cambridge Hospital. They are on the "dangerous list."

Today Hines was carried on the hospital stretcher to a first-floor ante-room of the court house. Judge Almy of Cambridge District Court went down from the second-floor court room and held court in the ante-room. Hines, who was too weak to plead, was taken to the hospital of Middlesex County Jail, around the corner from the court, after the hearing.

SAY HE STARTED THE FIRE.

A sixteen-year-old Cambridge girl accused Hines yesterday of attacking her and the police were looking for him.

The police say that Hines heard about it, bought a bottle of naphtha, splashed it around the bedroom in his house and set the place on fire.

Hines is thirty years old and colored. His wife is a patient at Worcester State Hospital for the Insane.

FRENCH MASSED IN THE ARGONNE

commander-in-chief are expected to cut off the German forces at St. Mihiel.

The capture of Esarges, about ten miles southeast of Verdun, by French forces is the hardest blow yet struck at the St. Mihiel-Metz line of communication.

It is impossible to estimate exactly the German losses, but in the fighting of the past two days and nights in the Woevre the Germans must have lost at least 2,000 in killed and wounded, not counting prisoners.

REPULSE 15 ATTACKS.

In addition to infantry and artillery attacks against the Germans, the French have sent a whole fleet of aeroplanes from the Metz-Conflans camp to bombard the German artillery positions from the sky.

The work of the French troops in storming the German position and in repelling German counter-attacks is described as brilliant. In the Hill, near Flirey, fifteen German attacks were repulsed.

Fighting has again developed in Belgium and in the La Bassee sector.

Major-General von Strantz is in direct command of the German triangle at which the French are making furious drives. Both the German Crown Prince and General von Hindenburg have been reported as being on this battle front.

In the forest of Ailly, through which an advance may be pushed against St. Mihiel, the French announce the capture of half the German trenches and the repulse of no less than fifteen counter-attacks.

Heaps of German dead are, according to the French War Office, are lying on the ground in the forest of Ailly.

ONE FORTIFIED HEIGHT BARS THE RUSSIAN ADVANCE

By FRANCIS LAVELLE MURRAY,
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

PETROGRAD, April 10.—With all the important heights of Beskid ranges in their possession, except one, the Russian army is being heavily reinforced for the final stages of its drive toward the plains of Hungary. Feeble Austro-German attempts to assume a counter offensive in the Carpathians between Uzsok and Lupkow passes broke down under the severe Russian fire. The dominating height in the Beskids which the Austrians still hold is known as the military mass as hill No. 909, and it lies a few miles south of Lupkow Pass.

In Poland another battle has developed on the northern edge of the Suvalk region and there is every reason to believe that Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the German commander-in-chief, has massed a heavy force there for an offensive movement by which he hopes to weaken the Russian pressure against the Austro-German armies in Galicia.

GERMANS WEAKENED IN POLAND.

All the seasoned German veterans that could be spared from Poland were sent into the Carpathians and the bulk of the troops now fighting under the German standard in northern Poland are reserves.

The capture of two German aviators near the Vistula and the death of several high German army officers in the wreck of a military train and the destruction of a military hospital in Bukowina by artillery fire are all reported in a statement given out by the War Office today. It follows:

"On the right bank of the Vistula a German aeroplane was shot to earth and two aviators were made prisoners by Cossacks. A German troop train, carrying the staff of a German army corps, was derailed in Poland and several superior officers were killed and others were wounded.

"Czernowitz (the chief city of Bukowina, has been almost completely destroyed by the fire of the Austro-German artillery. The city was set by fire. A military hospital was burned and about twenty helpless wounded soldiers perished."

The Carpathian campaign which is being waged by Grand Duke Nicholas will be recorded as one of the most brilliant in the military annals of Russia.

The Russians are carrying on their operations under almost insurmountable difficulties. Plunging through snow-filled valleys and clambering up the ice-covered mountain heights under the deadly fire of the Austrian artillery, the Russian troops are fighting against the forces of nature as well as against the armies of Austria and Germany.

Report British Blew Up Own Battleships

LONDON, April 10.—Private advices have been received to the effect that the British battleships Ocean and Irresistible, sunk during the bombardment of the Turkish fortifications on March 18, were torpedoed by British warships after they had been damaged badly by the fire of the Turkish forts.

Information from eye witnesses of the battle is that after the Irresistible was struck amidships by Turkish shells "one of our craft finished her with a torpedo." The fate of the Ocean, it is said, was similar. Having struck a mine which almost wrecked her, "she was dispatched by a British torpedo."

It is said this action was taken to prevent the helpless battleships from drifting ashore, where they might have fallen into the hands of the Turks.

The statement of the British Admiralty said that the irresistible "sank, having probably struck a mine," and that the Ocean "also having struck a mine, sank."

Harvard Prize War Poem Aimed at the Kaiser

Harvard's prize war poem, which was selected by Dean Le Baron Russell Briggs and Professor Bliss Perry, who acted as judges, is entitled "Gott Mit Uns," by C. Huntington Jacobs, of Los Angeles. It follows:

No doubt we are the people; Wisdom's flame
Springs from your cannon—Yes, from yours alone.
God needs your dripping lance to prop His throne.
No doubt ye are the people. Far from shame
Your captains who deface the sculptured stone
Which by the labor and the blood of pious millions calls upon His name.
No doubt ye are the folk. 'Tis to prove
Your wardenship of virtue and of love
Ye sacrifice the truth in seeking gore
Upon your altar of the Serpent of Love.
Yet still cry we who still in darkness plied,
'Tis anti-Christ ye serve and not your God."

Holland Seeks War Insurance

LONDON, April 10.—Numerous orders have been received in the London market from Holland for insurance of property against risks of war. Policies on property in Rotterdam, the Hague and certain Inland towns have been written at 80 shillings per 100 pounds for six months and 75 shillings for twelve months. On property in towns close to the German frontier the rate of five guineas for six months is quoted. The risk of an outbreak of war between Holland and Germany before the end of July is written at 85 shillings per 100 pounds.

WILSON TO DENY GERMAN CHARGES

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Officials of the State Department have begun drafting a reply to the latest German note, which protests the United States course in maintaining neutrality and intimates this country accepts the British blockade.

The German protest claims the United States has complained nothing in its diplomatic correspondence with the allies to object to American exporters the right to ship foodstuffs to the civilian population of a belligerent country.

Germany calls attention to the fact that the allies daily are obtaining large shipments of arms and ammunition from dealers in the United States, and declares that the American government, while insisting on its legal right to ship arms to the belligerents, does not with equal energy pursue its right to ship foodstuffs and noncontraband articles to the civilian population of Germany.

President Wilson's message of August, 1913, on Mexican affairs, is quoted by Germany, in this statement the President said:

DENY ALLIES FAVORED.

"It shall follow the best practice of nations in the matter of neutrality by forbidding the exportation of arms or munitions of war of any kind from the United States to any port of the republic of Mexico—a policy in general sanctioned by international precedents and certainly dictated by every manifest consideration of practical expediency.

"We cannot in any circumstances be parties to the shipment of arms in the contest that now distracts Mexico, or constitute ourselves the virtual umpire between them."

It is understood the American reply to the present complaint will deny vigorously that this government has acquiesced in any way in the order in council, and probably will refer to the last note sent by the United States to Great Britain, arguing at length its opposition to the viewpoint of the allies on the blockade question.

PRESIDENT POWERLESS.

As for the utterances of the President on the shipment of arms into Mexico, officials here held the Mexican situation constitutes a special case in no way comparable with the relations between the United States and the European belligerents.

There is no law by which the President, it was declared, could exercise the same authority when if he were desirous of forbidding the exportation of arms to all belligerents as to do so without authority from Congress would be unconstitutional.

The viewpoint of the American government has been from the outset that the embargo on the shipment of arms has been enforced impartially as to all belligerents.

Secretary Bryan's letter to Chairman Stone of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, covering this point, contended that if the Germanic allies were unable to enjoy the same advantages as to the delivery of arms into their country, while open to the naval superiority of Great Britain and not to any circumstances over which the United States had any control.

ALLIED WARSHIPS ATTACK TURKISH FORTS IN EUROPE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.
Staff Correspondent Boston American.

LONDON, April 10.—Warships of the Anglo-French fleet in the Dardanelles are now bold on European soil, attacking Turkish forts on European soil. From recent indications Anglo-French forces will attempt to seize Adrianople, the only stronghold which the Turks now hold on European soil.

Four battleships and four cruisers covering several transports were seen yesterday from Dedeagatch steaming toward Enos on the gulf of Saros. The warships opened fire upon the Turkish positions at a distance of three miles. After the bombardment had been continued about two hours the squadron withdrew toward the Dardanelles.

Enos is a port city on the small strip of European soil left in Turkish possession after the Balkan war, Dedeagatch is a Bulgarian port on the Aegean.

These cumulative strong attacks by the allies in the Dardanelles indicate that the much talked-of Spring offensive of the allied army is at last under way in real earnest.

CHANGES RECOMMENDED FOR BOSTON "L" SYSTEM

These changes are recommended by the Public Service Commission for the "IMMEDIATE" development of railway transportation in metropolitan Boston:

More modern, up-to-date surface cars.

Trailer cars in the Boylston street subway and on all other lines during the rush hours.

Transfer station at Eglseton Square.

Radical changes at Dudley street to expedite loading and unloading of passengers.

Changes at Maverick square to permit faster through service in the East Boston tunnel.

Eight-car trains in the Washington street tunnel.

New signal system for Washington street tunnel for rapid transit service.

BIG TRANSPORTATION MERGER IN GREATER BOSTON IS URGED IN REPORT TO THE LEGISLATURE

imposing documents ever prepared by a State Department.

It contemplates among other things:

Consolidation of the Elevated and the Bay State systems in metropolitan Boston.

Unification of the Cambridge and Dorchester tunnels and the utilization of the Midland division of the New Haven road to give through train service from Harvard square, Cambridge, to Mattapan.

Electrification of the Boston & Albany to unite with the East Boston tunnel for through service from Chelsea square to Boston, the tunnel to be connected by subway with the Boylston street subway, and then in turn the electrification of the Newton circuit of the Boston & Albany to provide a final through service from Chelsea to Newton.

Including the Elevated beyond Sullivan Square to Everett and the electrification of the Saugus branch of the Boston & Maine to provide rapid transit between Dedham, Boston, Malden and Lynn.

Those are among the important matters dealing with the ultimate developments of the transportation systems. The report contains many pertinent suggestions for immediate improvement of transportation, included among them the following:

Installation of modern and up-to-date surface cars on the Elevated.

Early use of "trailer" cars in the Boylston street subway and on other lines in the rush hours.

A transfer station at Egleston square.

Changes at Dudley street to facilitate the handling of passengers.

Eight-car trains in the Washington street tunnel and the faster operation of cars.

Relief of congestion at Forest Hills.

The report of the commission represents a comprehensive study of service in the metropolitan zone by William B. Bennett of Madison, Wis., assistant chief engineer of the Railroad Commission of that State, who was given leave of absence to study the Boston situation in behalf of the Massachusetts Public Service Commission. He was assisted by E. J. Steinberg, engineer-in-charge of the Milwaukee office of the Wisconsin commission and by the inspection and engineering force of the Massachusetts commission.

Among its incidental suggestions the commission advises that the Narrow Gauge be "let alone." It condemns any proposed merger of the Elevated with the lines of the Bay State outside of that district, "generally described as one within which th public generally uses the trolley rather than the steam train for going to and from Boston."

TAKE UP ZONE SYSTEM.

Then there is the consideration of the ultimate establishment of a zone system, under which persons traveling the same distance from Boston would pay the same fare, said fair to be in excess of five cents in residence districts.

With respect to future developments, Mr. Bennett recommended to the commission—which commission in turn submitted his recommendations to the Legislature in conjunction with its own conclusions on the various matters—that the metropolitan district be divided into six subdivisions, each having comparatively the same population. The subdivisions would be united in three pairs, these pairs comprising the following existing lines as the basis for development:

(1). Cambridge tunnel and Dorchester tunnel.

(2). Elevated system from Sullivan square to Forest Hills.

(3). Boylston street subway and East Boston tunnel.

Under plan 1, the line begins at Harvard square and comes into Boston on the Cambridge tunnel. It connects at Washington and Summer streets with the Dorchester tunnel and proceeds to Andrew Square.

It then contemplates the construction of two additional tracks on either side of the Midland division of the New Haven road, running to Mattapan.

Thus: Through traffic from Harvard square to Mattapan. This would eliminate the proposed extension of the Dorchester tunnel from Andrew Square to Codman Square. Estimated cost: $4,000,000. Estimated cost of Andrew Square subway, $1,000,000.

In the plan for Route 2 Mr. Bennet recommends the ultimate completion of the Elevated's extension from Sullivan square to West street. Eyerett. Connection would be made at West street with the Saugus branch of the Boston & Maine, which would be electrified. Grade crossings would be eliminated. This would give a route for Elevated trains from Sullivan square to Malden square and from Sullivan square to Lynn. At the opposite end of Route 2 the Forest Hills and—the Elevated would be connected with the West Roxbury branch of the New Haven, which also would be electrified.

Thus: Through train service from Dedham through Ofsleton to Sullivan square and thence to Malden square, finally to Lynn, and ultimately to Medford, by the electrification of the Medford branch of the Boston & Maine.

NEWTON TO CHELSEA SQUARE.

For route 3, board a train on the Newton circuit of the New Haven out in Newton and imagine that the circuit has been electrified. You ride in over the circuit, having paid your fare, of course, and connect with the Boylston street subway.

Imagine the Boylston street subway connected by a new subway to the East Boston tunnel at the Custom House. Ride through it. Continue on through the East Boston tunnel.

From the East Boston terminus of the tunnel, ride over connected tracks of the old and abandoned and astern division of the Boston & Maine and that freight line of the Boston & Albany known as the Grand Junction.

Then let your imagination carry you on over an elevated or surface extension, and you have ridden all the way, uninterrupted, from Newton to Chelsea square.

This is as Mr. Bennett recommends for route 2 in the ultimate development of Boston.

IF YOU WILL

HELD FOR DEATH OF CHILDREN IN FIRE

Two years ago last November Hines was sentenced to State Prison for three years for arson. His parole, after his term was two-thirds up, was secured chiefly through efforts of Former Mayor J. Edward Barry of Cambridge. Hines went home and has been about Cambridge since.

HAD A WARRANT FOR HIM.

Early last night Sergeant Leahy went to Hines' house with a warrant, issued on the complaint of a Cambridge man. Hines was out. The police say that someone "tipped" him that the police were seeking him and that he then bought a bottle of naptha at a factory and started the fire.

Apparently Mrs. Jarvis, the housekeeper, had put the two children to bed in their crib in one of the second floor bedrooms. Then she retired to her own room, after which Hines, according to the police version, began his frightful work.

FIND CHILDREN BURNED.

The first known of the fire was at 10 o'clock at night, when neighbors gave an alarm. Lieutenant Richardson of the police, who was one of the first on the scene, ran up an outside wooden stairway to the Hines tenement and found Mrs. Jarvis unconscious in bed from smoke stupefaction and burns. Richardson brought her to the sidewalk, where Dr. Feeley managed to revive her with the police pulmotor.

The fire was raging in the other bedroom. When the firemen and police had forced their way in they were horrified to find the burned bodies of little boy and girl in the ruins of the crib.

On the third floor of the building they found Hines, nakies except for a sheet wrapped around his body. He was in a desperate condition from smoke and burns, but like his housekeeper, responded to the pulmotor treatment.

The upper floors of the house were burned out and the firemen and police were surprised from the first at the rapidity of the flames. Investigation was begun. Patrolman Manuel Mello was put on the case. After inquiries Mello swore out a murder warrant against Hines today. Mello and Sergeant Leahy, armed with both warrants, went to Cambridge Hospital for Hines.

Hines had recovered enough to stand transit to the courthouse. Placed on a stretcher he was carried from Cambridge Hospital to an ambulance, driven to the courthouse, carried into the first floor anteroom and there arraigned and held for continued hearing on April 20.

MISS FLORENCE BESTWICK, twenty-three, No. 5 Walnut street, East Dedham. Cuts on forehead and right hand; badly shaken up.

MISS MARION COLLINS, twenty-four, No. 408 Right street; cuts on hands and face, bruises on right hip and suffering from shock.

The injured were carried to the home of Elmer Smith nearby, and an emergency call brought Doctors Andrew H. Hodgdon, John W. Pratt and Arthur W. Worthington, all of Dedham. The injured were removed to their homes.

Seven men who were also on the car escaped injury.

The car is known as the "press car," because it is run to accommodate Dedham people who work in the printing plants at Norwood. It usually carries thirty-five or forty passengers.

The accident occurred in the Islington section of Westwood. In jumping the track the car traveled several feet along the left side of the track, bringing up against a maple tree in the yard of Albert Dean. The passengers were shrouded with glass from the car windows.

The motorman of the car was Frank Magee. The company refused to give the name of the motorman, but passengers said his number was 8126.

'U. S. SHOULD TAKE HUERTA' — VILLA

By GEN. FRANCISCO VILLA.

IRAPUATO, Mex., April 10.—I do not believe Victoriano Huerta will dare step on American territory, but in case he should land in New York I feel sure the people of the great United States will at once cause his arrest. An assassin as vulgar and low as Huerta, a criminal of the stamp of that monster, cannot and should not step on territory owned by such a democratic and civilized race as the American people.

I was the first to protest against the assassination committed by him upon the persons of the President and Vice-President of the Mexican Republic, February 22, 1912, with an exceptional show of cruelty.

I feel sure that if this assassin, this traitor to the cause of the Mexican people and its best institutions, should disgrace any territory with his presence he will be immediately arrested and delivered to the conventionist government of Mexico to receive the punishment which he deserves.

Referring to the report which has been circulated in the United States to the effect that the Carranza General, Alvaro Obregon, was making a headlong advance against Torreon, I deny it emphatically. At the present time, the troops led by Celaya, having advanced that far northward from Queretaro, while he found it and arrived at my army he returned within the gates of the town and advised me not to move deep trenches around the place where they now await the attack by my army.

All aggressive movements by my men have been suspended since the day before yesterday. Before making a fresh and ultimate attack on Obregon I want to rest my men and horses and await reinforcements, which I expect will reach my headquarters inside of two or three days. As soon as they arrive I will know Obregon who is the superior master and promise to send him flying back to his bewhiskered chief, Carranza, with his tail stuck between his legs.

The bulk of my army is now resting at El Guaje, eighteen kilometres north of the enemy's position. The Carranistas, since they retreated into Celaya, have not and will not dare advance a single step northward.

LAREDO, Tex., April 10.—Soldiers of General Villa's army are advancing against Nuevo Laredo and at dawn the remaining members of the Carranza garrison in the Mexican town were ordered to entrench, ten miles away, to give battle. In a fresh attack Villaistas in the Constitutionalists were driven off by Villa's convention troops.

Armed Motor Craft to Guard Zeppelins

GENEVA, April 10.—Twenty-nine large motor boats armed with quick-firing guns, have arrived at Friedrichshafen by rail, to be used in patrolling Lake Constance and to defend the Zeppelin dirigible balloon against attack by French aviators from the French fortress of Belfort.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE'S Impressions of the Old Home After Forty Years

LICKED DAD, NOW BACK TO MOTHER

Cedric L. Haskell, the sixteen-year-old boy, who told Judge Morton that he had blacked his father's eyes in fight, is today back home with his mother, Mrs. Mineola Emery of Jamaica Plain, by grace of Judge Morton, although Samuel C. L. Haskell, the boy's father, still retains legal custody of the boy.

The strange testimony came out during a hearing of Mrs. Emery's petition that the decree of her divorce from Haskell be modified to give her custody of Cedric, whose middle name, spectators in the court-room agreed, should be Peered.

Haskell, senior, obtained a divorce in 1908. The wife subsequently married Howard P. Emery, whom Haskell had sued, and who was divorced by his first wife. Then Mr. Haskell married Miss Anna L. Driscoll of Copeland street, Roxbury.

Penrod—no, Cedric—told Judge Morton that he preferred to live with his own mother and a step-father to living with his own father and a step-mother.

PREFERRED MOTHER.

Cedric preferred to live with his mother although his father offered to put him through college, give him everything a boy could want, and finally place him in partnership in the Haskell leather firm.

"Use the brains God gave you," Judge Morton advised the boy, "and take advantage of the opportunities offered by your father." Judge Morton also announced that the boy must behave, intimating that if a year's probation under the present arrangement did not prove successful, a third party would have to be appointed as guardian.

The boy's principal objection to living with his father, although he claimed to love father and mother equally well, was that in his father's home in Medford he was given up entirely to the custody of a step-mother. "When they got mad," he said, "they took it out on me by talking about my mother."

"Once," he said, "when I was playing pinochle with my father I drew two cards unintentionally. He accused me of cheating. He ordered me out of the room, and when I went out I stopped to take some peanuts from a box. He threw a book at me, which hit me. That resulted in a fight and I blacked his eyes. But I apologized for that a week later."

TELLS OF ENCOUNTER.

The boy also told of another encounter. He managed to throw his father on a bed before the father finally overcame him. Then, the boy claimed, his step-mother laid on the strap while his father held him.

The father told the principal of a military school had asked him to take Cedric away from the academy. He declared that when he returned from a visit to his mother "he had a chip on his shoulder as if he had something up his sleeve."

7 Licenses Refused by NewBedfordBoard

NEW BEDFORD, April 10.—The License Board has granted eighty-nine of the ninety-six licenses which may be issued.

Adolphus A. Swan and Charles S. Bayliss, who were removed by Mayor Mathaway several weeks ago after a prolonged hearing on charges preferred by the Mayor, took part in the meeting, at which the issuances were made. Swan and Bayliss have petitioned for a review and Judge Jenney has assigned Monday for hearing the arguments. Meanwhile the commissioners have authority to act and could have granted licenses at any time after April 1, providing the advertising of applications had expired.

Miss Gertrude E. Piper, a milliner, living at No. 45 Montebello road, today refused to discuss her suit in the Suffolk Superior Court against Minnie K. "Miss Piper and I were engaged for six or seven months prior to Christmas of a year ago," said Soukilian. "Then we began to disagree and decided to call everything off."

Evangelist Billy Sunday Puts Lash on the Devil at Paterson

Billy and "Ma" Sunday exercising with the medicine ball; the evangelist in his garden and out for a hike.

Evangelist Wilts a Collar at Each Strenuous Session of His Day's Battle.

PATERSON, N. J., April 19.—"Back to Hell with you, Mr. Devil!" This was Billy Sunday's parting shot at Satan in his fiery harangue at the Evil One at the close of one of his biggest meetings in the Tabernacle yesterday.

Nearly 15,000 people heard the baseball evangelist during the day. The afternoon audience was nearly 9000, that of the evening almost twice as large.

Sunday wilted two collars, one at each meeting, through his exertions. He and "Ma" Sunday were radiantly happy over their day's success. "It always takes a little while to get them, but he's getting Paterson surely," said Ma at the close.

Billy is going to visit New York and speak there, after all. He has accepted an invitation to make a short address at the New York Press Club on Monday afternoon, although Monday is his day of rest.

ROD IN PICKLE FOR "MORAL LEPERS."

Now that Sunday has paved the way with five days of fiery oratory, Paterson is eagerly waiting to see how many penitent sinners will walk up the centre aisle of the tabernacle next week. "I feel that the preacher boy and schoolgirl rally last night is the signal for converts to flock in by life hundreds," said Mr. Sunday. The evangelist put the "soft pedal" on slang in his address to the young people, but once in a while his own enthusiasm caused him to break through. "I hold that the boy who goes to the school is bigger than the young lobster that loafs in the streets, smokes cigarettes and goes into groggy shops, where he tries to drink the whole bunch under the table," declared Mr. Sunday.

Mr. Sunday is going to extend himself in earnest when he reaches the subject of "Moral Lepers."

So far Mr. Sunday has collected $4,725, less than one-third of the cost of the temporary tabernacle.

"Ho, ho," was Billy's opening onslaught on the devil. "I don't wonder you are turning pale, Mr. Devil! that your teeth are joggling. You're worried, Mr. Devil.

"You've had your heel on the neck of Paterson for a long time. You've blighted enough lives. You have blighted enough hearts of men and broken enough hearts of men and women by the waywardness of their boys and girls. You have damned enough souls.

"You have stood long enough chocking the throat of New York until you have driven out every semblance of religion—until you have driven them commercially crazy and drunk—until they think they are immune from God's wrath.

"You have throttled New York, Brooklyn, Cincinnati, Boston Minneapolis, Chicago, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities.

"Ha, ha; you stood with your hands clutching Philadelphia until they tore loose your old grip and stood and told you 'back to Hell with you.' Come on, come on. We will show you that old Paterson will do the same. Back to Hell with you."

Sunday's attack on Satan followed the response to a dramatic appeal for people to stand up and show their colors for the Lord.

This appeal came unexpectedly—as it always does in his revivals.

He had been telling the hearers of the wicked King of Judea, Ahaz, who had stopped all worship of God; who had closed the temple and broken the sacred vessels, and in setting up idols for the people to worship had forbade them to sing their songs. Then he told how Ahaz's son, Hezekiah, when he came to rule, cleaned the temples, smashed the idols and commanded the people again to sing.

"The church today has money, wealth, culture, members," he said, "but she hasn't got what she had fifty years ago or even twenty-five years ago—the cry of Jesus and the song of salvation," he declaimed, shaking his fist at that section of the platform in which sat the ministers of Paterson.

An enthusiastic old man seated in one of the first rows in the auditorium approved the song with an ode-time, long drawn out "Hallelujah, Glory Be."

"If old Paterson falls on her knees for Christian prayer," continued Sunday, "her song of salvation will not begin in a brewery; it will not start in a booze joint; it will not commence in a red-light house. It has got to start in the temple of God, and it has got to start in your hearts, which should be temples of God.

"Now are you going to make your hearts temples of God?"

Sunday paused for a moment and looked his audience over from front to back, from side to side. Then suddenly he demanded:

"Stand up and show me that you are."

THE DEVIL DEFIED.

For an instant, so startling was the sudden appeal, no one rose.

But within five seconds a block of women about ten rows from the front jumped to their feet, perhaps fifty in number. Then on each side other little groups got up.

"Come on, come on, come on," encouraged the Evangelist, with upward gestures of both hands.

There was a general rising. Each time he raised his palms it was as if he was physically lifting the people from their benches. At the end of a minute or so eight out of every ten in the big auditorium had risen. Only here and there among the 5,000 or so in the big auditorium was there a small section, or a little group of individuals, that did not heed his call.

"O, Lord, I know you are going to do great things in Paterson," exclaimed Billy as he looked out over the standing crowd and then raised his eyes and cried, "Great things, O Lord, great things, great things."

Then suddenly he bent downward over the edge of his platform, with his fists clinched, his eyes blazing, his whole face expressing anger at something or somebody, and began his denunciation of the Devil.

He sneered as he said: "Ho, ho—I don't wonder you are turning pale, Mr. Devil!" He exulted as he exclaimed, "You're worried."

He raised imaginary blows on his adversary as he told of the blighted lives, of the throttling of cities by the devil's hand, of the terrible damage the persuasion poured from his face in an unheeded stream.

When he reached his climax, his

"Old Nick" Warned He Must Let Go Grip on Boston as Well as Paterson.

cry, "Come on, come on, back to Hell with you;" he straightened up, fell into the fighting crouch affected by pugilists, extending his left arm, with his right drawn back and danced back and forward as if waiting for his foe to tend.

In the evening he addressed thousands of students from the high schools of Paterson and the surrounding communities. He said in part:

"Listen, you boys, when you go into the world you've something more than a mortar board cap, a varsity suit, a frat pin, a bulldog pipe and rah-rah-rah to make a successful man.

"It is like a girl when she is about seventeen and her mother introduces her to some young man, she says: 'Mamma, mamma, what is he?'

"But when she is thirty-five she says: 'Mamma, mamma, for God's sake where is he?'

"But, girls, none of you are up against the 'where is he' yet.

"We have the greatest nation in the Universe, and the greatest opportunity to become something in all the world, and if you don't do something you are a mutt, a mollycoddle, excess baggage, and nothing but a mere cipher.

"Now young folks, I want to say something with the hope that I may induce you to put your life in italics. The greatest fun in life, the joy for something better, is nature clearing the ground. That is why the young man who goes West in tired of being a molehill and wants to be a mountain.

FOOL THE UNDERTAKER.

"Branch out and make yourself larger than you now are in character. A midget in body can be turned into financial account in a dime museum. Ringling Brothers will pay well for a physical monstrosity.

"A midget in characters and a midget in morals is hateful. I tell you you can't look up and admire a runt in mind and a runt in character unless you are married to the runt, and then you do it under protest.

"We can fix the people to build schools, build colleges, build universities, hire teachers; we can give you the opportunity but we cannot inoculate in you a desire to learn.

"Building schools is one thing; education is another. One thing is up to the taxpayers, the other is up to you.

"I hold it is better to feed our boys and girls in schools, colleges and churches than to feed them gambling, drug shops and the institutions that draw them under.

"Manhood and womanhood do not depend upon muscle. Apparent size is one thing, real size is another.

"Every time you smile you put a crimp in the undertaker's business, keep the hearse under the shed, embalming fluid out of your body and keep the quartet from singing 'Lead, Kindly Light.'"

What! 55-Cent Berries on This Poorhouse Bill

Medford people yearned today to know who is getting all the rich food at the poorhouse.

Mayor Haines is particularly anxious, so much so that he has written Chairman J. W. Bragdon of the Overseers of the Poor to find out why the poorhouse bills contain items like strawberries at 55 cents a box, mushrooms, grapefruit, olives at 80 cents a bottle and so on.

Medford husbands who are trying to see the wife's spring duds and not skip explosions on the monthly bills at the same time, think of the combination of poorhouse and strawberries and can't figure it out. They wonder what one would get at the Copley-Plaza Hotel if the poorhouse provides hothouse fruits.

State Peace Board Brings New Bedford Sides Together

NEW BEDFORD, April 10.—The State Board of Arbitration and Conciliation, which is conducting a public hearing on the strike of the loom-fixers at the Whitman mill, has arranged a conference between the mill managers and a committee of the strikers Monday. This is the first hearing under the law which authorizes the board to compel attendance of witnesses, and in addition to those directly involved, a number of mill treasurers and labor union officials were present.

Malden Mayor May Head Police Force

As the Board of Aldermen has repeatedly refused to confirm his nominees for police commissioner, Mayor Blakely of Malden has decided to take the office himself. He has submitted the proposition to the city solicitor to see whether such a course will be legal, and if it is he will appoint himself at once.

SUGGEST COMMON SITE FOR SUNDAY

The baseball grounds on Boston Common are suggested for the "Billy" Sunday tabernacle, when that evangelist comes for his Boston campaign in 1914.

This suggestion is voiced through the office of the "Billy" Sunday campaign committee, which has its office in Tremont Temple. Since arrangements have been made to bring the evangelist to Boston, and the money can be easily raised, the site of the tabernacle has been under consideration.

Many have spoken favorably of the old Huntington avenue baseball grounds. Others have suggested the old site of the Boston & Providence station.

A central location is needed. Secretary Duncan McPhie of the Sunday campaign committee in an interview today, said:

"Much pressure is brought to bear upon us from many who are interested in the coming of "Billy" Sunday that the baseball grounds of Boston Common would be a very central location to erect the tabernacle for the evangelist.

"Those who have urged this site say that when the Christian Endeavor Society held its national convention some years ago in this city the Common was placed at its disposal.

"There is no reason why this site should not be granted, but I am in no position to speak for the committee. Many suggestions which have come to us name this site as the most central in Boston. It would be a strategic move to have 'Billy' Sunday preach where nearly thirty years ago he played ball on scrub nines."

PLEA FOR LETTER BY MRS. BARTOL

An exciting moment in the trial of the contested $2,000,000 will of the late Louis Cabot at Dedham came when Mrs. Charlotte H. Bartol, Cabot's elder daughter, appealed to Judge Hardy to decide whose property was a letter offered as one written by Mrs. Bartol to her mother in 1909 with reference to Louis Cabot.

When it appeared the letter was found among Cabot's papers, Judge Hardy decided he could not exclude it and it was read as follows:

Old Farm, Readville.

Dearest Mum—I was distressed to see you running around with your napkin in your hand yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock with your old tired and excited expression. I am writing now to beg you to stop for a moment and reflect with me. Begin by thinking that we have been through these same sorts of experiences before today and that the sensible thing to do is to apply some of the lessons that we learned in those other trials.

Papa is your baby and you and I are alike in jumping to the least wail our babies make. Now this is not good sense. Your baby is being taken perfect care of—with his trusty company of nurses and doctors (here is no real need of his that can arise without its being attended on as promptly as necessary. You can't try to duplicate these people's work by springing up to attend to his whims. You have a much more important office to fill. You are the captain and the only possible captain to the ship. There is no substitute for you and if the captain uses up his strength by chasing round the ship pulling at rope ends that are out of place or stopping to put straight quarrels in the forecastle, who is to keep a calm hand on the rudder and a quiet eye on the stars to set a right course?

Now, to be a strong and cheerful captain (the only kind to be of any use in a crisis) you must do three things:

1—You must eat your meals quietly and allow nothing to interrupt them and you must eat them at right hours.

2—And you must get into your bed at 10 o'clock and not get out of it until 8 o'clock.

3—You must take a drive or walk during the daylight hours.

"READING TO PA."

Be quiet and realize with me that it is a weakness and in the end an active and terrible injury to pa and to yourself if you allow these hours to be infringed on. You must keep your place at the helm and let trifles right themselves or stay wrong—they don't matter in comparison to the guiding of the good ship through the storm and you are the only one who can do this high task; and the only way for you to accomplish it with your constitution is to attend religiously to your 1, 2 and 3 as written above. Make them the three articles of duty creed and make every other individual in the house know it, too. Every one of them will help you to keep such a resolution except Pa. He will try to draw you away by being piteous. (I can't remember how to spell it.) Don't let him succeed. Remember again that he is now your baby and babies thrive better under firmness than they do under coddling and indulgence.

The preacher knows that this sermon holds the good doctrine, but she finds it hard to practice the same. In her case it is Mamma who holds the rudder and out of the tangle below decks. Let him help you too, if he can. It doesn't know I write, but may see the letter of course.

Don't let me hear any more of reading to Pa before breakfast. It's naughty besides being tiresome.

Your loving daughter,

C. H. B.

The postmark on the letter was dated July 27, 1908, and was written by Mrs. Bartol while at Aiken, S. C., to her mother, who was then living in Brookline.

DEATH OF JUDGE HARVEY H. BAKER

Judge Harvey H. Baker of the Boston Juvenile Court, whose court for child offenders made him known throughout the country, died today of pneumonia at his home on Newton street, Brookline. He had been ill a week.

Judge Baker was named Chief Justice of the Juvenile Court by Governor Curtis Guild in 1906. Judge Baker always discouraged publicity in connection with juvenile delinquents and all trials were held behind closed doors.

It was always his effort to start with delinquent parents and children as an advisor rather than as a judge.

Speaking of the law that created the Juvenile court Judge Baker recently said:

"The nature of this law is often misunderstood. One prominent object of the law of 1906 was to prevent making a criminal record, but as equally prominent and explicit object was to have the children followed up much more carefully than ever before and to put an end in children's cases to the practice of giving probation without oversight."

"It is futile to drive the youth of our city from the street corners unless some wholesome provision be made for them elsewhere, otherwise we should only be intensifying the evil conditions by their congregating without supervision in more secluded places."

Radcliffe Girl Prints Names to Get Candy Bills

If you were a college girl, and oh, so nice, and then along came a horrible poster announcement declaring to the whole college the fact you owed money for candy, well, wouldn't it make you real peeved?

Now, Gladys Telfer is a dandy sort of girl, but in her new role as bill collector at Radcliffe she is making the eagle over-scream in an effort to collect quarters from seven different mugs.

Gladys tried a variety of methods to make her classmates unloosen for the sweet stuffs they tucked away at a recent sale for the benefit of the Radcliffe Vacation School. All her efforts came to naught, however, so she took her final and parting shot today when the name of each girl was published in the college paper.

Sculptor Bitter Killed by Auto

NEW YORK, April 10.—Karl Bitter, well known sculptor, died in the New York Hospital today from injuries he received when he and his wife were struck by an automobile in Broadway, near the Metropolitan Opera House. Mrs. Bitter's condition is not serious. Bitter, whose works have won him a place among the first sculptors of America, was born in Austria and came to this country in 1889. He was art director of the Buffalo and St. Louis expositions. Among his works are the $220,000 bronze doors of Trinity Church.

Medical Examiner Leary will perform an autopsy on the body of Mrs. Norah Lynch, thirty, a widow, who died at the City Hospital after she had collapsed in the home of Mrs. Emma Smith, at No. 22 Blagden street, where she was employed as a cleaner. Dr. Jose L. Blanco of No. 19 Huntington avenue said she had taken an overdose of sedative, but at the City Hospital a cerebral hemorrhage was assigned as the cause of her death.

POLICE HUNT FOR LAWRENCE SLAYER

LAWRENCE, April 10.—An argument over cards led to the slaying of two men and brought about a man hunt today for the man accused. Policemen are searching the city and suburbs for the slayer, who is armed and desperate.

The men slain are Michael Borelli, proprietor of a shop at No. 142 Elm street, and Vincenzo Pittocheili, who attempted to act as peacemakers. The man sought is known only as Jauzi, and was a stranger to most whose present when the quarrel developed.

A card game was in progress in Borelli's shop, the losers to stand treat. Suddenly a dispute arose over a play and Manzi threw a glass in the face of Ernest Martilli. They grappled and Borelli and Pittocheili tried to separate them.

Deprived of his opportunity to pummel Martelli, Manzi drew a revolver and fired two shots before a move could be made by any of the players. Borelli and Pittocheili each received a wound in the head.

Covering the other men present with his revolver, Manzi fled from the shop. Some one telephoned for the police and they were quickly on the trail of Manzi, with a good description of him. However, he had sufficient start to elude them and a general alarm was given the police of Lawrence and surrounding communities.

The two men shot were taken to the hospital, but were dead upon arrival.

Report Dr. Creel Won for Boston

Mayor Curley, according to Washington dispatches today, has won in his long endeavor to bring Dr. R. H. Creel, who has been in charge of the New Orleans campaign against bubonic plague, to Boston to become public health officer.

It is now believed government officials will consent to release Dr. Creel on May 15 in order that he may come here. It is expected Dr. Creel will reorganize the health system of the city, making seven divisions, medical, sanitary, food inspection, quarantine, laboratory, child hygiene and clerical.

Dr. Creel has rendered the government excellent service in cleaning up health conditions in Porto Rico, the Philippines, Baltimore, Hawaii, Providence and in New Orleans. The present Boston Health Board is composed of Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, chairman; Dr. P. H. Mullowney and Dr. William J. Gallivan. The terms of the two latter have expired.

HOLYOKE NIECES QUIT WILL FIGHT

Madeline and Marjorie Holyoke of Bangor, who were recently students at Dana Hall and at Wellesley College, have compromised with the contestants of the $500,000 will of Frank H. Holyoke of Bangor, today's despatches from Los Angeles announce.

The twin sisters, who were given almost the entire estate of the lumber merchant in his will, are nieces of the testator.

Mr. Holyoke's widow and her step sons, Sydney and Harry Holyoke of Boston, were left only minor bequests and began a stubborn contest in the California courts to break the document. Now an agreement has been reached whereby the nieces will turn over $250,000 to the contestants.

Harry Holyoke is a clerk living at No. 10 Waterloo street, Dorchester. When seen today he refused to tell what his plans for the future would be, saying he would know better when the money was finally in his hands.

Mrs. Holyoke and her stepsons attacked the will, which contained charges reflecting on his wife, on the ground that the lumberman was insane. They secured a judgment in the Superior Court at Los Angeles and the nieces had entered an appeal from this judgment when the compromise was reached.

Foss After Office but Hasn't Got It Picked Out Yet

Former Governor Eugene N. Foss may again be a candidate for public office. This time it will be on neither the Democratic or Republican ticket. He states that he might some day be a Prohibition candidate.

He has not as yet decided the office for which he will contest. It might be for President, United States Senate and then again he might seek his old position as Governor of the Bay State. Nevertheless, his slogan will be, "Climb on the Water Wagon and Win with Foss."

He states that Massachusetts will soon wake up to prohibition. He also states that the outlook for a Democratic victory during the coming year is very doubtful. The "Old Boy" adds, "Look see if Dave would get that third nomination easy, doesn't it?"

"Birth of a Nation" Enthralling Story

1,500 Guests See History Told on Film

THE WONDERFUL MIDNIGHT RIDE OF THE KLU KLUX CLAN
THE ASSASSINATION OF LINCOLN AND THE ESCAPE
THE MOTHER AND SWEETHEART FIND THE WOUNDED HERO

Scenes in "The Birth of a Nation."

Beauty and Magnitude of Griffith's Work Noted at Tremont Theatre Production.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

David W. Griffith has written an epic on a film.

"The Birth of a Nation," which was shown to 1,500 special guests of the management at the Tremont Theatre last night, is a wonderful historical drama and an enthralling human story combined by one of the master dramatists of the generation.

I cannot describe this picture in a half column, or a column. A page would not do it justice. There has been some talk that it contains scenes offensive to negroes.

It deals boldly with the negro excesses during the reconstruction period in the South, which are historical, but most certainly does not reflect upon the race and I am quite sure nobody last night left the theatre feeling inflamed against the respectable and industrious colored population of Boston.

Mr. Griffith came before the curtain at the end of the first act, which deals with the Civil War. A moment before, standing in the wings, he heard a Boston audience burst into applause at the sight of the Stars and Bars waving over a Confederate company marching to war to the tune of "The Bonny Blue Flag." He is a Southern man, and he was so moved by the sympathy of his audience that he could hardly speak. He declared he felt so happy over that applause that he didn't care what became of the picture.

IMPRESSIVE PICTURE.

"The Birth of a Nation" is based upon Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," but of course Griffith has widened and expanded upon the theme. The first part deals with the Civil War period, the second with the Reconstruction and the Ku Klux Klan.

It is impossible to keep from bursting into admiration at the marvelous way the author has woven the great incidents of the war into his film. He is an amazing impressionist; his scenes flash the story at you with never a rest. You sit overpowered by the beauty and the magnitude of the pictures.

You see a whole battlefield covered by thousands of men as from a hilltop, and again you are in the trenches witnessing a bayonet charge in ghastly detail. His battles are stage managed so that all the drama which is contained in a titanic struggle of armies is conveyed towards you. And the finale of the first part, the death of Lincoln, is also enacted with terrible realism.

The first part is history we know. The second is history less familiar. It deals with the conquered South after the war. We see the Confederate returning to his shattered home, endeavoring to begin again. And then comes the enfranchisement of the negro, the carpet bagger, and negro domination, the most terrible punishment ever inflicted upon a proud white race.

It is shown how the whites, abandoned by their brethren in the North who never learned the truth, finally recovered their country through the agency of the Ku Klux Klan, that mysterious secret order of ex-Confederates which rode only at night and which disarmed the negroes. This whole story is told more graphically than novelist or dramatist could possibly tell it.

Griffith scenes are like short sentences; no long pictures, no dialogue, no elaborate pantomime. And yet it is extraordinary how you come to love his heroes and heroines, both of the North and South, revealed as they are in these glimpses.

SHOWS PUBLIC TODAY.

The actors of this drama deserve the highest praise. Henry Walthall as the Confederate colonel who founds the Ku Klux; Miriam Cooper and Lillian Gish, the heroines, and Mae Marsh, as the fascinating little girl who leaped to death from a cliff to avoid a negro pursuer; Spottiswoode Aiken, George Seigmann, Josephine Crowell—they are all good. Griffith employs no poor actors. There is a large orchestra which plays admirably chosen music. The picture will be shown to the public today.

SECRET TRIAL FOR 'AMERICAN SPY'

WASHINGTON, April 10.—It is stated here unofficially that the State Department has asked the Department of Justice to investigate the London report that a regular organization of spies is operating from New York and is in possession of American passports.

The charges grow out of the detention in the Tower of London of Anton Kuepferle, the American citizen held as a spy on charges involving also one Muller, who says he is a British subject, and a man named Hahn, said to be of German citizenship.

Kuepferle's papers appeared to show he was a Brooklyn wool dealer. His trial is fixed for the latter part of the present month at the Old Bailey, London. The trial may be secret.

Inquiry in the vicinity in Brooklyn indicated by the address on Kuepferle's passport failed to bring out any information concerning him. The number given is a vacant lot.

Secretary Bryan, Counsellor Lansing and other State Department officials said today they had never heard of the Kuepferle case except through the press. It is known the department has been in communication with Consul-General Skinner concerning the case, and that he has been instructed to furnish Kuepferle with counsel.

Kuepferle will be tried before the Lord Chief Justice. Under ordinary circumstances a man charged with espionage would be tried by courtmartial, but the authorities in the present case, in view of Kuepferle's claim of American citizenship, decided to try his case before the Civil Courts under the defence of the realm regulations, as recently amended by Parliament. Under these regulations trial in camera is permitted.

Kuepferle has informed the American Embassy that he is married, but does not know his wife's whereabouts. He has been quite uncommunicative, even to his counsel, since his arrest, except to insist that he is innocent.

His occupation is given in the passport as that of a salesman, and Kuepferle says he came to England in that capacity, although he has not told the name of his employers. He professes to regard his plight with indifference.

Boston Baptists to See Active Volcano

Boston Baptists will see a volcano in active operation when they take the special trip to Los Angeles for the eighth annual meeting of the National Baptist Convention on May 11. S. W. Meyer of Boston, manager of the American Publication Society, has guaranteed the Baptist ministers and their friends that upon their return trip to Boston they shall see the crater of Mt. Lassen in eruption from the car windows of the special train. They will leave the South Station May 11 and attend the convention May 19 to 26. More than 200 will be enrolled.

Harvard Prize Poem Attacks German People

Charles Huntington Jacobs of Los Angeles has been awarded the $25 prize offered by the Harvard Advocate for the best poem written by a Harvard undergraduate. The poem is entitled "Gott Mit Uns." Dean Briggs and Professor Bliss Perry were the judges.

Jacobs is a junior at Harvard and prepared at Exeter Academy. His earlier study days were spent at Thacher School near Santa Barbara, in his native State. The prize poem which is published in the current issue of the Harvard Advocate follows:

"GOTT MIT UNS."

No doubt ye are the people; Wisdom's flame
Springs from your cannon—yea from yours alone.
God needs your dripping lance to prop his throne;
Your gleeful torch His glory to proclaim.
No doubt ye are the people; far from shame
Your captains who deface the sculptured stone
Which by the labor and the blood and bone
Of pious millions calls upon His name.
No doubt ye are the folk; and 'tis to prove
Your wardenship of Virtue 'and of Lore
Ye sacrifice the Truth in reeking gore
Upon your altar to the Prince of Love.
Yet still cry we who still in darkness plod:
"Ye Antichrist ye serve, and not our God!"

Wireless Telephone Talk to Pittsfield

Edison's Daughter to Name Submarine

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 10.—Mrs. Sloane, a daughter of Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, has been invited to christen the new submarine now under construction at the navy yard here.

PORTSMOUTH YARD WORK INCREASED

Secretary of the Navy Daniels, replying to Boston critics, declared that instead of diverting work from the Portsmouth Navy Yard he has selected that yard for building the first submarine ever constructed in a government yard.

The criticism by a Boston newspaper was that work had been taken from the Portsmouth Navy Yard and the force reduced because of "Secretary Daniels' displeasure over the defeat of the Democratic ticket in New Hampshire."

"I showed my 'displeasure' by selecting the Portsmouth yard for building the first submarine ever constructed in a government yard," said Secretary Daniels in a letter to the editor of the newspaper.

"Instead of the force at Portsmouth being reduced, it actually has gained $4 per cent, in the number of men employed during the past two years. For February, 1913, the pay rolls at the yard showed 550 workmen employed; while for February, 1915, the roll was 842."

Secretary Daniels points out that much coal and time would be saved by having gunboats and light cruisers on duty in the Gulf of Mexico retained at New Orleans instead of having them go 1,500 miles to Boston or Portsmouth for repairs.

Hurls Shoes at Boston Judge

CHICAGO, April 10.—Stanislaus Danga, publisher of a Polish newspaper in Cleveland, is being tried here by a secret "tribunal of three." The trial is being conducted in the headquarters of the Polish National Alliance. The charge against Danga is treason. It is alleged that he accused the alliance of being a Russian government hireling.

Late yesterday Danga was seen running from the alliance headquarters without his shoes. It was understood that he had removed them and hurled them at one of the judges.

The three men sitting as judges in the case are Julian Schupert of Minneapolis, J. Gregorwicz of Boston and F. Grodski of Baltimore.

Kneeland Sees a Joker in Bake Bill

William A. Kneeland, representing the Master Bakers' Co-operative Association, sees a joker in the Sunday baking bill in the Senate. "The right is given to bakers without limitation, to sell bakery products on Sunday, whereas, by the present law, the bakers alone have that right," says Mr. Kneeland.

FORBES DISCUSSES BETHLEHEM RISE

By B. C. FORBES.

NEW YORK, April 10.—Here are the inside facts as I learn them, of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation stock ownership, which has been the storm centre of speculation in Wall street this week, and the position and policy of Charles M. Schwab, the company's president and principal owner.

Mr. Schwab holds about $6,000,000 of the total $14,862,000 common stock outstanding.

Mr. Schwab also owns some $8,000,000 of the company's $14,703,000 preferred stock.

Mr. Schwab is not short of the stock now, nor ever has been.

He has not been responsible for the recent sensational speculative rise in the common shares, which has carried their price from 39 to 147, Thursday's high level. The quotations yesterday, on less excited trade, fluctuated between 102 and 115, closing at 112, up 7 points for the day.

ACCUMULATING STOCK.

Important stock exchange firms have been accumulating the stock for some time chiefly for customers and now own between 15,000 and 20,000 shares.

A wealthy investor, also connected with a stock exchange house, owns a huge block.

The floating supply is computed at under, rather than over, 5,000 shares.

In certain parts of the country there has been persistent buying of the stock based on the company's enormous earnings from war orders.

Mr. Schwab filled an order for 150 big guns for Germany months before the war began.

He also supplied costly armaments to Russia and to other belligerent countries.

Earnings and profits are now on a scale never before approacheu, nu Mr. Schwab is uncompromisingly opposed to inaugurating dividends on the common shares—the preferred only recently was put on a full 7 per cent. per annum basis after a series of lean years. Cessation of war contracts would seriously reduce earnings.

Mr. Schwab's fixed policy is to build up a strong, enduring enterprise, with facilities capable of providing the implements of peace as well as the implements of war.

To this end he plans to plow back into the property many millions of dollars, both in this country and in South America.

The $14,862,000 common stock was originally "water," having been valued at only $1 per share.

Mr. Schwab now regards it as valuable, though this week's pyrotechnics have excited his disapproval and occasioned him keen regret.

FAILED TO FIND "CORNER."

Neither Mr. Schwab nor the stock exchanges (which accepted the suggestion made here yesterday and conducted an investigation) discovered any "corner."

The extraordinary gyrations are understood to have been caused by moderate short covering in a market almost bare of floating supplies of the stock.

All stories of an impending or an accomplished change in control of the Bethlehem Company are ground-less.

The strongest banking interests in the country, without exception, declared to me yesterday that the stock is becoming decidedly cheap.

They see no justification for a boom, nor justification for a boomlet.

They state that daring speculators of large means and not the general public are mainly responsible for the wild gambling now being witnessed—transactions which exceed a million and a quarter shares—with advances all along the line.

United States Steel common, for example, rose 7½ points, to 57, in spite of the fact which can be here stated on the best authority that the steel business has had a reaction during the last three weeks. To-day's statement of unfilled tonnage at the end of March will not show up as well as the February report.

The only important industry enjoying real prosperity is copper. Therefore, the sudden outburst of gambling fever in stocks is regarded by the greatest bankers as unjustified and demoralising, rather than helpful.

Boston Arena Opens Summer Dance Term

One of the largest gatherings that ever attended a dance in the city is expected at the formal opening of the summer dancing season at the Boston Arena tonight. The Arena management has everything in readiness for the opening, and the lovers of modern dancing will be treated to a number of surprises.

The Arena is the largest and most complete dance hall in New England, and, being artificially cooled, it is the ideal place to dance during the Summer months. Dancing will be held every evening except Tuesday, and some high class exhibitions will be given on each evening.

Tonight Miss Helene Sweney and Joseph Crocker will present the opera tango, which will be the first time it has been danced in this city. Miss Marion Maguire and Charles Cassidy will also give an exhibition.

"How to Make Your Church Popular" is told by the Rev. C. K. Jenness, of the Tremont Street Methodist Church. He says:

"Adapt your church to the neighborhood. We have now called our church 'The Neighborhood Church.' Our aim is to make the church next door appeal to every to every one in the neighborhood. The old and the young will find some interesting work to be found in the church.

"When people see what the church in their neighborhood is trying to do they will respond. Do for the same thing which will be interesting to all in the church life. The young must be met just the same as the old.

"We want people to rally around the church and to have fellowship, one with another, in the church life.

"There is the social, industrial and religious side of the church life.

"The social life is to make people in the neighborhood feel they have a place to spend one or more evenings in the week in congenial surroundings. On the industrial side there is some work to be done in the church life. Every one should get harnessed to some work. Get into line with something.

"The religious side of the church life will be easily seen as the interest in the church is marked. The higher life is made evident in the church. The neighborhood should feel this and keep feeling it.

LEONARD PROBABLY LOST TO RED SOX FOR THREE WEEKS; STAR HAS BAD COLD IN ARM

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

GOVERNOR WALSH TO START RUNNERS ON THEIR WAY IN BIG CATHEDRAL ROAD RACE

Johnson to Oppose Braves Champions After Victory

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 10.— A young man who answers to the name of Walter Johnson will probably oppose the Braves when Stallings' band of world's champions battle the Senators in the final game of their series here today.

Johnson is some pitcher, failing that dear old word in its correct meaning, and consequently the Braves will have to play at top speed all of the time if they are to breeze in a winner.

The "Big Swede" will not start for the full nine innings, but he will be in the box long enough to prove to all whom it may concern that the Washington club pays him a fat salary for something besides his good looks.

Stallings' crew is not particular who does the hurling for the Senators, as they believe that they possess enough class to win from the best mound men in captivity. The Braves are sure to give Griffith's pitchers a warm reception today, as the 3 to 1 defeat which they received yesterday has made them fighting mad.

Anxious to Turn the Tables on Senators.

Johnny Evers and his gallant assistants are anxious to prove to the law abiding citizens of this man's town that they are the real class of the baseball world and it seems that the honorable Senators have been selected to act the part of the proverbial goat.

Bill James may work a few innings against Washington today, but the chances are that Stallings will use a couple of his young hurlers in the box.

It was originally planned to use Dick Rudolph and "Lefty" Tyler in the tussles here. The "Miracle Man," however, changed his plans at the last minute, and intends to rely on his youngsters in the exhibition contests.

Rudolph left for his home in New York last night, while "Lefty" Tyler and Fred Mitchell boarded a rattler for Boston. These three men will join the Braves in Boston Monday afternoon.

Rudolph is already in grand condition and it looks as though he would be Stallings' choice for the opening game of the season against the Phillies next Wednesday. Tyler also says that his arm is in great shape and that he is fit to perform in the box.

The Braves will leave here tonight for Bridgeport, Ct., where they are booked to play an exhibition game. They will then journey on to Boston and will arrive in the Hub before midnight Sunday.

But back to that little old game of baseball, between the Braves and Senators, which was staged here yesterday. Griffith's clan won by a count of 3 to 1, as we stated before. But that does not mean that the Braves were outclassed. It was far from losing so.

We do not like to rap umpires, as this is a profession which has been of great help to a number of honorable men after they have grown old and feeble and have almost lost their eyesight. We must state, however, that the umpire at yesterday's tussle was a Class A Joke.

We do not know where the Washington Club got him from, but he served their ends very well. This gave the Senators ten men, which was too much of an advantage for the Braves to overcome.

The Champions, however, did not do much execution with the bat. They only secured one hit, a double to left by Ted Cather in the eighth session.

Harry Harper Had Many Dazzlers but Was Wild.

Harry Harper did the hurling for Washington during the first six chapters. He is blessed with a fine assortment of dazzlers, but Boss Stallings did not experience many unpleasant moments while Harper was in the box as he was very wild and we feared that he would annihilate some of the Braves' star ball players.

Harper passed twelve men during his solours in the centre of the diamond and would have caused much more injury in this respect if the honorable umpire had not been doing his level best to keep Washington in the running all of the time. He would come to Harper's rescue by calling a strike on a ball which did not even get on a speaking acquaintance with the well-known plate.

Joe Boehling, who tosses the spheres from his port side like Harper, finished out the tussle. He also had a tendency to be wild and passed a couple of ablebodied athletes.

Tom Hughes pitched the full nine innings for the Braves. He allowed only six hits and would have been credited with a victory if a first-class umpire had been on the job.

Senators Start Off with Two-Run Lead.

A traveling ball club very seldom gets good treatment from umpires during a Spring series, as the official is employed and paid by the home club. As it seems very good policy from a box office standpoint to have the home team finish in front, the umpire considers it his duty to help matters along in a close game.

Washington secured a brace of runs off Hughes in the opening stanza. Moeller opened the inning with a fly to Magee. Foster followed with a clean single. Milan tried hard to break into the hit column, but his best effort was a wicked smash into the box, which Hughes knocked down and deflected to Maranville, who tossed the runner out at first, on a close play.

Foster took second on the play and breezed across the registering station when Gandil doubled. The latter counted on Morgan's single. Morgan was left stranded at first when Rondeau flied to Cather.

"Herb" Moran Makes Sensational Catch.

Washington's final run was made in the eighth frame. Foster hit a long fly to Moran in left field. Cather came in for the ball in an effort to get it before it touched the ground. He was unsuccessful, however, the sphere getting away from him and rolling to the left field fence for a home run.

Herb Moran contributed the fielding feature of the game. It was a sensational catch of a long fly hit over his right field foul line. The blow was labeled for at least a home run, but Moran decided otherwise.

After a wild sprint to the right field fence, near the foul line, he caught up with the ball and speared it with his gloved hand by making a flying leap through the air. It was one of the greatest catches ever made here and the little right fielder was tendered a fitting ovation by the "fans."

The Braves' only score was made in the fourth frame when Harper passed Magee, Schmidt, Smith and Maranville in a row, forcing Magee across the plate.

Red Sox Notes.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

CINCINNATI, O., April 10.—Dick Hoblitzell has recovered from his strain and is ready to resume his old position at first base. He will probably play today or tomorrow. Cincinnati is Dick's home. He played on the Reds for years and is a great favorite here. He is a dentist and has an office in the business district.

• • •

The weather yesterday was perfect, the best day the Red Sox have ever enjoyed here. Most of the exhibition games in past years have been played in cold and damp weather. The change to a bright sunshiny afternoon was doubly welcome.

• • •

The Red Sox will leave here Sunday night for Richmond, Va., where an exhibition game will be played before the team goes to Philadelphia for the opening of the championship season on Wednesday.

• • •

The Cincinnati team played in their traveling uniforms yesterday. They are exactly the same as the Red Sox except Cincinnati has a narrow red band on the caps. From the grandstand it was hard to separate the two teams.

• • •

Olsen, who played second base for the Reds in the Cleveland series, is short-stop. He tipped his teammates off to how the Naps used to steal home on "Dutch" Leonard two years ago. Tommy Griffith tried the trick and got away with it, much to Leonard's chagrin.

• • •

The Red Sox made 13 hits against five by Cincinnati, yet had hard work to win the game.

• • •

Larry Gardner's brother called on him at the hotel today.

• • •

Joe Burns of Taunton and Jim Mc-Donough of Lewiston, who left Boston for Hot Springs with the first squad March 4, left Boston for home tonight. They have enjoyed the trip immensely.

• • •

Carrigan says the Cincinnati in-field is very hard to defeat. It looked that way when the players were bootingthem and farowing wild in yesterday's game.

• • •

Fred Coumbe, formerly a Red Sox pitcher, and who figured in the Vean Gregg deal last season, paid a call on his old friends last evening. Coumbe returned from the South with the Naps and is on his way to Cleveland.

Fowler and Nevins Win.

Fowler and Nevins were winners in Class A-B billiard matches at Little-Seid's. Fowler defeated Cushman, 200 to 111, and Nevins won from McCarthy 200 to 131.

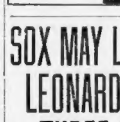
SOX MAY LOSE LEONARD FOR THREE WEEKS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

CINCINNATI, O., April 10.—If rain does not interfere the Red Sox will engage in another clash with the Cincinnati Reds this afternoon. It is to be hoped the game will not be like the one yesterday, which Boston won, 6 to 5, for that was a sorry exhibition, no matter from what angle you look at it.



There were some bright spots to it, however, among them being two perfect throws to the plate from left field by Twombly, the former Medford High School lad, who is now a member of the Cincinnati Club.

Twombly cut off a pair of Red Sox runners in one inning, which feat kept the score down to where it was. Gainer and Gardner were the victims of Twombly's accurate throws, and they were trying to tally from second on singles to left.

"Dutch" Leonard essayed to pitch for our boys, but the home fruit king had very little of anything, including speed, and while the Reds had scored five runs on three hits Leonard was excused for the day.

• • •

We will soon be back in the Hub and the training trip will be forgotten once the regular season gets under way. We have experienced considerable cold weather in the South, but when we had enough clear, warm days to get into splendid physical condition and will get away from the post Wednesday ready to put up a thrilling battle for the National League championship.

• • •

Hank Gowdy should have a great year on the diamond. The Columbus youth played wonderful baseball for us in 1914, but his work was not appreciated until near the closing days of the league campaign and in the world's series. He was battling close to .400 early in the season, but he did not attract a great deal of attention as the Braves were losing ball games with great regularity. He did not bat as well near the end of the season as he did in the early days of the pennant fight, but he got some of the credit which he deserved as we were battling our way through the National League at a seventy-five-mile clip.

• • •

Gowdy is a natural ball player. Nature also blessed him with a large, powerful body which makes him of tremendous value to us as a catcher and batter. A catcher has not much chance to win fame in the big leagues unless he is big and strong. He gets down up a great deal and if he is not big and powerful enough to stand the gaff he is sure to drop back to the minors.

• • •

Gowdy batted for an average of .343 last season. These figures are not very inspiring as they show that Hank hit safely only once in every four trips to the plate. The big catcher, however, was one of the timeliest hitters in the league and also had a habit of getting extra base blows. His wealthy wallops won many a ball game and made him one of the chief heroes of the world's series.

• • •

The Columbus star gained much confidence by his experiences and performance in the world's series. When the series opened, the supposed wise men asserted that Schang of the Athletics would outclass Gowdy, but they were mistaken. Hank did better work than Schang at both the bat and in the field and was to the job all of the time and improved with each game.

• • •

Bert Whaling should also be an important factor in the campaign this year. He is a fine ball player and a good enough catcher for any man's ball club. "Moose" is not quite as good a batter as Gowdy, but he is nevertheless dangerous with the bludgeon and is liable to break up a ball game any day.

SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 10.—We will complete our stay in the Capital this afternoon and tonight for Bridgeport, Ct., where we are scheduled to play a Sunday game. After our engagement in Bridgeport, we will board a rattler for Boston, where we will arrive late Sunday night. It will certainly feel good to be back in the Hub once more. I left Boston six weeks ago, and, although I have been with one of the liveliest squads of ball players in the world, I will enjoy getting back to our old stamping grounds.

• • •

The average baseball "fan" pictures a Spring training trip as a pleasure jaunt. Let me assure you, gentle reader, that it is far from being such. There are few veteran ball players who like to start upon a Southern training trip as it means plenty of hard work on the ball field, sore and aching muscles, long railroad jumps, nights spent in sleeping cars and often stops at poor hotels. Many of the league clubs always travel first class when it is possible to do so, but it is not uncommon for a team to stay at a small city for a day or two where it is impossible to secure high class accommodations.

• • •

The last week has been a strenuous one on the entire ball squad. We have been busy every minute. We played at Charlotte, Greensboro, Durham, Richmond and Washington. This was a hard schedule and it was, of course, necessary to do much traveling. The railroad connections between some of these points were not of the best, and this made things disagreeable for everybody.

• • •

We will soon be back in the Hub and the training trip will be forgotten once the regular season gets under way. We have experienced considerable cold weather in the South, but when we had enough clear, warm days to get into splendid physical condition and will get away from the post Wednesday ready to put up a thrilling battle for the National League championship.

At the annual meeting dates for the National regatta were announced as August 1 and 2, a week before the United States National regatta at Springfield, Mass.

The English stiff-oared crew will be enroute to Springfield at the time of the Canadian Henley and will be asked to stop at St. Catharines. St. Paul, Philadelphia, Boston, Baltimore, New York and clubs from other cities will be invited.

Though scores of Canadian oarsmen are now either at the front or preparing to go the Dominion will be as largely represented in the United States National regatta as usual.

$23,000 Purses for Charter Oak Races

There are ten events, three more than last year, for $23,000. The value of the Charter Oak purses has been reduced from $10,000 to $5,000. With the Pilgrims, Chick McLoughlin's all-star aggregation, as the opponents, the Harvard baseball team will open its 1915 season this afternoon on Soldiers Field. The game will start at 2:30. These teams were scheduled to meet last Saturday but the big snow storm forced the postponement.

Willcox and Harte, the star battery of the 1917 freshman team, will start the game for the Crimson, but Wally Garrett, the old Dedhamian twirler, will relieve Willcox, and, if the weather is warm, Dr. Sexton will give Captain Frye and Eddie Mahan a short workout.

Biddle, a big southpaw, is Chick McLoughlin's choice for the start, and Harry Martin and Steve White will be seen in action before the end of the contest.

Harvard Crew Men Must Know How to Swim

They are not taking any chances on drowning fatalities out Harvard way these days. At the Newell and Weld Boat Club, eights, fours, pair oars and many singles are sent out onto the river daily.

Now and then some hapless party or parties are overturned and in one or two instances the unfortunate oarsman has met death. In order to make this an impossibility, each oarsman now must sign a paper stating that he can swim a 150 feet.

Wray Has Confidence in Harvard Eight

Coach Jim Wray of the Harvard crew today reiterated his confidence in the men who composed his first eight and declared that his Varsity is coming along in fine shape for its first race of the season against the Navals at Annapolis on May 15, two weeks hence. The first craft was outclassed the only time yesterday over the regular Henley distance of one and five-sixteenth miles.

O. D. MacLaughlin of the Fencers' Club of Boston captured the New England fencing championship, by winning all of his bouts in the foils competition at the B. A. A. Robert Van Norden, Tracey Putnam and Bruce Nichols of Harvard finished second and third, respectively, and these three qualified for the national championship.

Temps Says Willard Is Not Champion

PARIS, April 10.—The Temps declares that Jess Willard does not belong to the champion class of Jack Johnson. Previous to the war the International Boxing Union decided that the championship rested between Johnson and Sam Langford, who were to have fought last November. Langford, therefore, retains the right to meet the winner of the Jeannette-Johnson fight, according to the decision of the boxing union.

FEDERALS OPEN SEASON TODAY

GAMES TODAY.

St. Louis at Chicago.
Pittsburgh at Indianapolis.
Buffalo at Brooklyn.
Newark at Baltimore.

By FRANK G. MENKE.

The Federal League, which pries the lid off of the 1915 baseball season today, promises to furnish fandom with the real major league brand of baseball and a real battle for the pennant.

There are eight clubs in the junior league and eight clubs look to have a chance for the big honors. There never was a league in which the whole circuit seemed as evenly balanced as is the Federal League this year.

The Pittsburgh club, when we saw it in its training camp, struck us as being one of the best looking outfits that ever was gathered together. It is a team that seems to be strong in every department and with a secondary outfit almost as powerful as the first.

Then there's those Indianapolis "peaches" who rank as the greatest slugging outfit in baseball history. The team had nine or ten .300 hitters last year and the team, as a whole, averaged close to .300 in clubbing. It seems just as strong—even stronger—this year and the team that beats Indianapolis probably will be the team that gets the pennant.

1916 Olympic Games Not Transferred Yet

BERLIN, via London, April 10.—The Olympic games of 1916 have not yet been transferred from Germany, and the International Committee has not the power to direct such action, according to a statement made by Count von Francken-Sierstorpff, vice-president of the German Olympic Committee.

Whether or not the games will be held depends upon the course of the war, the Count said, but if they are held it will be in Berlin.

'WILLARD DREW MONEY FOR HIS FIGHT'--CURLEY

NEW YORK, April 10.—H. H. Frazee, the backer, and Jack Curley, the promoter of the Willard-Johnson fight, arrived in New York late last night, having left Willard in Baltimore. The champion will come to New York on a special train tonight, after appearing at the National A. C. in Philadelphia.

Curley said that the receipts for the Havana fight amounted to $110,000 and that the champion was well satisfied with the amount he received, despite reports to the effect that he did not draw down any money.

Curley declared that he (Willard) got three times as much as he ever received for his share in a fight. He said the Mutuel machines took in about $80,000, with Johnson the favorite.

COFFEY GETS FIRST CHANCE.

Billy Gibson, manager of Jim Coffey, and Max Blumenthal, manager of Al Reich, were at the train to meet Frazee and Curley, and each made an offer of $25,000 for the champion to appear against his man in a ten-round bout. Both were turned down by Curley, who declared that Willard must have time to do a theatrical turn before he boxes.

Curley told Gibson he would give Coffey the first chance at Willard because of Gibson's efforts in behalf of the Havana fight.

The promoter declared Johnson had made a splendid showing for twelve rounds and fought fairly well in the next six, but that after that he gradually wilted. He said the negro had no money outside of what he received for the fight.

TO TEST PICTURE LAW.

The men behind the championship battle will make an early test of the law against showing moving pictures of fights in this country. The films will be developed in Canada, thus avoiding confiscation in this country were an attempt made to bring them in. The picture rights have already been sold in Cuba for $10,000.

Portland, Ore., Bars All Boxing Bouts

PORTLAND, Ore., April 10.—Chief of Police John Clark has put a ban upon all boxing bouts, amateur and professional, in Portland. The regulation will remain in effect until a new city ordinance governing amateur bouts has been acted upon by the city commissioners.

It is alleged that a law permitting four-round amateur bouts is being violated by athletic clubs.

Eller Sets Up New Hurdles' Record

NEW YORK, April 10.—John J. Eller of the Irish-American A. C. made a new world's record in the 120 yard low hurdles race at the annual games of St. John's College in the Armory of the Thirteenth Regiment. He traveled the distance in 15 seconds. The mark which Eller displaced was 15 4-5 seconds, made by Joe Loomis, the Chicago athlete, at the Fordham University meet on January 23 last.

Gibbons to Box for Middleweight Title

NEW ORLEANS, April 10.—Mike Gibbons today signed articles for a world's championship match with Jimmy Clabby, or the best middleweight challenger, to be held before Dominick B. Tortorich's club, the date to be set later by the club. The distance is to be twenty rounds and a diamond belt will be hung up for the winner.

SCHOOLBOY NINES GET UNDER WAY

The schoolboys start the ball rolling today, when several of the public and private school nines lineup for the initial games of the season. These early contests will afford the coaches an opportunity to look the players over and pick the athletes who will be in the regular lineup when the real season starts.

* * *

Nine veterans have reported to Captain Jack Ross for the Melrose High baseball team. First base is the only position left vacant through graduation, and Scrotton and Jones are having it out for the initial sack job.

* * *

The box work will be taken care of by Captain Ross, who will have his brother Frank on the receiving end. This Ross battery looks like a combination that will be hard to beat. The twirling Ross was one of the leading pitchers in the Suburban League last year.

* * *

The Melrose infield will probably be the same as that of last season, with Emery at second, Russell at short, and Grant Holl, the all-interscholastic choice of last year at third. Gateley in left field, Nowell in centre and Pike in the right garden will have to hustle to hold their jobs, as many of the new candidates have their eyes on outfield positions.

* * *

April 7, Wakefield at Melrose; April 10, May 1, T. H. at Melrose; April 14, Newton H. at Melrose; April 17, Alumni at Melrose; April 19, Malden at Melrose; April 21, Wakefield at Wakefield; April 24, Malden at Malden; April 26, Woburn at Woburn; April 28, Somerville at Melrose; May 1, Everett at Everett; May 3, Chelsea at Melrose; May 8, Medford at Medford; May 12, Somerville at Somerville; May 15, Malden at Malden; May 19, Medford at Melrose; May 22, Open, at Melrose; May 26, Everett at Melrose; May 29, Stoneham at Melrose; May 31, Manchester at Manchester; June 2, Stoneham at Stoneham; June 5, Melrose at Melrose; June 9, Revere at Revere; June 12, Arlington at Melrose; June 16, Medford at Medford; June 19, Malden at Melrose.

*Suburban League games.

* * *

The South Boston High nine will probably be without the services of Captain "Eddie" Connor this season, as he is now suffering with water on the knee.

* * *

Dr. William T. McCarthy has the Arlington High track team working each day and everything thus far points to a successful season on the cinder path. A dual meet may be arranged between Arlington and Belmont High School.

* * *

Fred Hill, who played a corking good game at right forward for the Brockton High basketball team last season, has been elected to lead the quintet on the floor next season. Hill is a junior.

* * *

Coach George Sexton and Captain Charles Ziegler of the Huntington School track team have received the trophy won at the schoolboy games on February 27. It was presented by Colonel George Billings of the H. A. A.

* * *

The large squad of candidates for the South Boston High baseball team are working out daily on the M street playgrounds. Coach Scanlon has some very promising material on hand, and is going after the championship of the Boston High School Junior League.

* * *

April 14, Boston College High at Boston; April 16, Chelsea High at Chelsea; April 19, Dedham High at Dedham; April 23, Brighton High at Brighton (Boston H. S. League); April 24, St. John's Prep at Danvers; April 27, Charlestown High at South Boston (Boston H. S. League); April 30, East Boston High at South Boston, (Boston H. S. League); May 4, Hyde Park High at Hyde Park (Boston H. S. League); May 7, Quincy High at Quincy; May 11, West Roxbury High at West Roxbury (Boston H. S. League); May 14, Brighton High at Dorchester; May 21, Brighton H. S. at South Boston; May 25, East Boston High at East Boston (Boston H. S. League); May 28, Hyde Park High at South Boston (Boston H. S. League); May 29, Swampscott H. S. at Swampscott; June 1, West Roxbury High at South Boston (Boston H. S. League); June 4, La Salle High at Waltham; June 9, Revere High at Revere; June 11, Brighton High at Brighton; June 16, Wentworth High at Weymouth; June 17, Hingham High at Hingham.

* * *

Volkmann and Roxbury Latin baseball teams will open the Triangular Private School League series, with a game next Tuesday afternoon on Volkmann Field, Allston.

* * *

Most of last year's Waltham High ball players have graduated, but the new candidates bid fair to fill their places in good style. Rollo Fagan, who was on the mound last spring, is now at Colby, and Seth Johnson, who held down the initial sack, is also at college, leaving two positions that will be hard to fill.

* * *

The Weymouth High School management furnished the following schedule of games for the season:

April 17, Hingham High at Weymouth; April 17, Bridge Tech at Weymouth; April 19, Milton High at Milton; April 22, Newton High at Weymouth; April 24, Brockton High at Weymouth; April 28, Dedham High at Weymouth; May 1, Cambridge Latin at Weymouth; May 5, Charlestown High at Weymouth; May 8, Mechanic Arts at Weymouth; May 12, Medford High at Medford; May 15, Rockland High at Weymouth; May 19, Quincy High at Weymouth; May 22, Boston College High at Weymouth; May 26, Quincy High at Quincy; May 29, Brockton High at Weymouth; June 5, Braintree High at Braintree; June 9, Milton High at Weymouth; June 11, Rockland High at Rockland; June 16, South Boston High at Weymouth; June 18, Lowe Classical High at Weymouth; June 19, Portland, Me., High at Weymouth.

* * *

A game between the Arlington High and the Belmont High baseball teams is to be played on the grounds of the former next Friday afternoon. Arlington High will also clash with Concord High in a dual track meet at Concord on April 19.

Tufts and New Hampshire State College open their baseball season at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Oval at Medford.

The Medford lads are primed for the initial contest, having been pushed to the limit by Coach "Jack" Slattery during the past week. Tufts is confident that it will be able to start the season with a victory.

Coach Slattery will have either Whittaker, the veteran right hander, or Krepps, the southpaw, in the box for Tufts. Captain "Barnie" Lee, who has been out of the game for some time with an attack of grippe, will be back at his old position at third base.

The New Hampshire boys are sure that they will give the Brown and Blue a royal battle. In Captain Bissell, who will undoubtably start the game on the mound, the up-State nine has an excellent little twirler, who may cause the Medford team no little amount of trouble.

Wolgast Claims Part of Willard's Earnings

CADILLAC, Mich., April 10.—Ad Wolgast says he has a right to collect one-eighth of the total ring earnings of Jess Willard as long as the latter fights. Wolgast exhibits a contract drawn between Tom Jones and Willard as proof. Attorneys declare that Ad can collect this amount.

In 1913, when Willard was being managed by Charley Culver, I advanced $1,500 to enable Jones to buy Willard's services," said Wolgast.

The former lightweight champion claims to have received money from Willard on the contract, as the result of the champion's fight with Charlie Miller and Gunboat Smith.

Wolgast says he relies on Jones' honesty to get his share of Willard's earnings.

Joe Jeanette Knocks Out Arthur Pelky

MONTREAL, Que., April 10.—Joe Jeanette put Arthur Pelky away in the eighth round of the scheduled 10-round bout.

After rocking Pelky with heavy lefts and rights in the seventh, Jeanette landed a stiff left to the solar plexis soon after the start of the eighth round. Pelky took the count of eight, but as soon as he was on his feet Jeanette landed another heavy left to the jaw and Pelky took the count.

Vin Campbell Back in Federals' Fold

BALTIMORE, April 10.—Bill Phillips, his cornccb pipe and the Newark Federals have arrived in town. When Bill reached the Emerson Hotel he found Vincent Campbell, the fleet-footed outfielder, who had threatened to quit the game this year, waiting for him. Phillips seemed overjoyed at getting the star outfielder back into the fold.

Willard Promises Old Conqueror a Match

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 10.—Champion Jess Willard greeted Frank Lyons, a heavyweight fighter who won a decision over the champion at Elk City, Okla., in 1911, when he passed through here, and accepted Lyons' challenge for a title contest a year hence. Lyons will begin preparations at once.

Chicago Politicians at Federal Opening

CHICAGO, April 10.—Victor and vanquished in the recent mayoralty election may meet today at Weegman Park when the Whales open their season against the St. Louis Federals. Mayor Harrison also promised to attend.

PFAFF'S Beer as a Food

Charles F. Chandler, M. D., LL. D., Sci. D., Professor Emeritus of Columbia College, New York, in an address delivered in New Orleans last November, said:

"When we come to consider the relation of beer to food we are struck by the analogy between beer and bread. Bread is made from cereals; so is beer. The bread with little water is solid, the beer with more water is liquid. The yeast is employed in both. It produces alcoholic fermentation in both. It converts both into palatable and readily digested food. Both contain alcohol and carbon dioxide.

"Beer contains only from three to four per cent. of alcohol and is not intoxicating when taken in ordinary quantities. Beer also has bitter and aromatic bodies derived from hops, which give it an acceptable flavor and produce tonic effect.

"Further, beer is one of the foods free from bacteria. You might be afraid of water, of milk, but the method of making beer, drying, heating, pasteurizing and filtering it completely frees beer from bacteria.

"Beer is a food and wholesome; it contains carbohydrates and albuminoids and mineral materials required by our system; it is appetizing; it aids digestion; has enzymes.

"I myself have been familiar with the use of beer as an article of food from my childhood, and as I was born in 1836 I think I am a pretty good specimen of the food value of beer.

"You know we read in the papers a great deal about adulterations. I have had occasion to investigate the question, and I find that adulteration in beer is gross exaggeration. There is no adulteration."

The Author of "The Wages of Sin"

An Entertaining Story of a Plot That Turned Out as a Comedy

SEVERAL men wanted to marry Mrs. Archer, for she was a widow with a comfortable income. There were five in particular, each of whom might be likely to win the prize. The names of these five were: Simpson, Carpenter, Savory, Ward and Allington. The first four knew that they all sought to wed the widow, but they did not know that Allington had a similar desire, for he kept his hopes secret.

Now, Mrs. Archer had a strange liking for people who wrote stories, articles, novels, etc., and she used to gather this sort of people around her.

While the race for her hand was in an exciting stage, a novel entitled "The Wages of Sin" was published. It created a tremendous sensation, and every one wanted to know who the author was, for it had been written by some one who used the nom de plume "Dalesman."

Mrs. Archer read "The Wages of Sin" about a dozen times, and she simply worshipped "Dalesman."

"Ah! if I could but meet him," she sighed. "To a man like that I could refuse nothing."

She uttered these words in the presence of her five admirers and others, and practically each of them wished he could say that he was "Dalesman."

Allington, who wrote short stories and articles, left the house in the company of Simpson, who, not knowing that Allington wanted to marry Mrs. Archer, began to sigh about her.

"Ah, if I could only win her, Allington," he said with such a heavy sigh that it nearly removed his companion's hat.

"If you were the unknown author of 'The Wages of Sin,'" Allington responded, "you could put up the banns tomorrow, couldn't you?"

"Not half!" exclaimed Simpson. "She thinks whoever wrote that is a wonder."

"Simpson," said Allington, slowly, "I wrote it."

"What!" Simpson stared at his companion with an expression of mingled wonder and disbelief. Then he added in gurgling tones. "Are you kidding?"

For reply Allington withdrew a letter from his pocket. At the head was the name of the well known firm who had published the novel, and the letter began as follows:

"Dear Mr. Allington:

"With reference to your story, 'The Wages of Sin,' we would like to make a few suggestions—"

The rest was folded here. Allington apologized for not letting Simpson read any more, explaining that the rest was personal.

"I've seen enough," Simpson cried. "Fancy you being the author and keeping mum about it."

"Look here, Simpson," said Allington thoughtfully, "suppose I let you pose as the author of the book, and you marry Mrs. Archer, how do I stand?"

A wild hope sprang into Simpson's eyes when he grasped the purport of Allington's words.

"Will you do that?" he cried. "Will you let me say it is my book?"

"It depends on yourself. Where do I come in when you marry Mrs. Archer?"

A financial discussion followed, the result of which was that Simpson agreed to pay Allington five dollars a week for three years, the first payment to be made on the day he married Mrs. Archer.

"You must not make the announcement until I give you leave," said Allington. "I must make arrangements, in case the firm hear that you claim to be the author."

Simpson looked disconsolate. "I was going back to tell her now," he muttered.

"That would be silly. You would perhaps muddle up the whole business," said Allington. "You must wait till I give you leave."

Mr. Simpson's patience was severely taxed for day after day went by without Allington giving the required permission. On the following Wednesday both men were going to Mrs. Archer's home, to what she called a "literary evening." Simpson was among the first to arrive, and he looked anxiously for Allington. The latter appeared within a few minutes and settled all Simpson's doubts and fears by nodding.

THE BAIR IS LIFTED.

"Can I tell her tonight?" Simpson whispered when he reached the author's side.

"Tell her now if you like."

Simpson turned first red and then white by turns. He walked slowly toward Mrs. Archer, trying hard to recollect the speech he had prepared for the occasion, but it had vanished from his memory.

"Mrs. Archer," he said, "I have a confession to make, a secret to tell. I had no means given to give publicity to my secret, but your stirring words of the other night have—encouraged me to say that it would be unjust to you to keep my secret any longer."

Mrs. Archer and her guests gazed at him expectantly. He puffed out his chest.

"I am Dalesman! I wrote 'The Wages of Sin,'" he said.

His words created a tremendous sensation. No one spoke for nearly a minute, and then the silence was broken by a delirious cry which emanated from Mrs. Archer.

"Oh, Mr. Simpson!" she cried, rushing at him with outstretched arms. For the moment he thought she was going to embrace him, but she accepted herself by grasping his two hands.

"You genius," she said proudly.

Simpson smirked and gently pressed the two hands he held. A coy smile, followed by a blush, crossed the widow's face.

"What a reward!" he murmured. "That you are pleased with me puts all other praise in the shade.

"What can I say?" exclaimed Mrs. Archer. "What words can I use to express my joy?"

The door opened at that moment and Mr. Carpenter entered. He was dressed in a magnificent manner, as none of the literary circle had seen him before, and he advanced toward Mrs. Archer and bowed low.

"Good evening, Mrs. Archer," he said.

"Good evening, Mr. Carpenter. Oh, I have such news for you."

"And I have news for you," Carpenter exclaimed. "I have deliberated long whether I should tell you, but I feel that I cannot keep my secret any longer."

A look of eager anticipation came into Mrs. Archer's eyes. Was she to receive another celebrity this evening?

Carpenter grasped the lapels of his frock-coat and drew himself up very straight.

"I am the author of a novel, Mrs. Archer," he said.

"Oh, how splendid! Is it published?"

"Yes." Carpenter paused and gazed around at the company for a few moments, in order to prolong the sensation.

"And the title, Mr. Carpenter?"

"The Wages of Sin."

"What!" screeched Mrs. Archer.

"I am 'Dalesman,'" murmured Carpenter, bending low.

But the tense silence that greeted his words caused him to raise his head quickly. Mrs. Archer and her guests were staring in astonishment from him to Simpson. The latter's face was very pale, but he tried to mask his uneasiness with a foolish grin.

"You say you are 'Dalesman?'" inquired Mrs. Archer.

"Yes," replied Carpenter, his hands leaving his coat and settling up a nervous manner.

"But Mr. Simpson has already told us that he wrote 'The Wages of Sin.'"

"So I should think," blustered Simpson. "But perhaps this is a joke, Mr. Carpenter?"

"Indeed it is not! How dare you say you wrote the book, when I did?"

"I wrote it," retorted Simpson.

"You didn't; I did," cried Carpenter.

An elderly guest stepped forward.

"Gentlemen," he said, "both can't have written the book. It rests with one of you to produce proper proof."

"I will bring proof," cried Simpson and Carpenter in chorus.

Silence fell on the room. The various guests gazed at one another uneasily, and then at the two claimants; but the tenseness was broken by the arrival of Mr. Savory. He came forward and saluted Mrs. Archer, and the conversation became general, the subject being "The Wages of Sin."

Suddenly everyone started as they heard Savory say in loud tones to Mrs. Archer:

"I have decided to drop my nom-de-plume of 'Dalesman.' In future I shall write under my own name."

ANOTHER CLAIMANT TO FAME

Everyone stared blankly at Mr. Savory, who appeared to enjoy their astonishment, not understanding its real cause.

"Are you 'Dalesman,' the author of 'The Wages of Sin?'" demanded Mrs. Archer in jerky accents.

"I have that honor," exclaimed Mr. Savory.

"I don't quite understand," began Mr. Savory.

"Neither do we," remarked the editor of the local paper, "for you are the third gentleman who has claimed tonight that he is the author of 'The Wages of Sin.'"

"Show me the—the frauds," he said in uncertain tones.

Simpson—they began together, and then stopped abruptly.

The opening of the door signalled the arrival of Mr. Ward. He entered the room with a self-satisfied smile on his face and advanced toward Mrs. Archer. Before he could speak she cried:

"Are you the author of 'The Wages of Sin?'"

"Why, how did you know?" he inquired jovially. "I thought I was going to surprise you."

Mrs. Archer went into hysterics.

The evening came to an abrupt termination, and the guests departed in groups, discussing the strange situation. Allington had slipped away unnoticed, his being the first departure.

As if by common consent, the four claimants went together along the street. For some time they walked in silence, and then Carpenter said:

"Has Allington been talking to you chaps?"

"Yes," came the reply in chorus.

Confidences were exchanged, and it appeared that Allington had made a similar proposal to each of the four, and had told them all to make their announcement on this night.

"It seems that we've all been badly fooled," muttered Savory. "I don't think I shall visit the widow again in a hurry."

"Nor I," chorused the other three.

As a matter of fact, Allington was no more "Dalesman" than were his four dupes; he was merely out for a practical joke. The firm who published "The Wages of Sin" also ran a magazine, for which they had accepted a short story by Allington with the same title as the novel. Hence the letter, one of the suggestions of which was that the title of the short story should be changed.

By the way, Mrs. Archer is a widow no longer. She is now Mrs. Allington.

DOUCET'S interpretation of the apron is shown on this blue serge model. Here the apron, of the material, is held up by a strap drawn through two eyelets. Below it the skirt hangs in irregular scallops. Quite as novel is the bodice with a one-sided effect accented by a black bail trimming and a large red rose on the opposite side. A white linen vestee adds a mannish touch.

IN this blue taffeta afternoon suit Callot has used shirred flounces of the taffeta to give fulness to a fourreau of tulle in the same shade. The jacket of the taffeta is longer than many of the Spring models and more conservative in cut. Callot shows a few fuller skirts, similar to this model, and she also features the cleverly draped skirt.

Friendships of Youth

Some Famous Men Who Were Devoted Comrades

FRIENDSHIPS that are lasting form one of the world's treasures, and the affection which existed between famous men is often a source of inspiration.

At the Charterhouse School in England two boys met whose association in after-life is immortal. They were Dick Steele and Joe Addison. When Steele had served in the House Guards he started a little paper called the "Tatler," and he got his old chum Addison to write for it. The paper only consisted of one article a day, and out of a total of 271 numbers to which it ran, Addison wrote forty-two. Then they started another and still more famous paper, called the "Spectator," which ran to 555 numbers, and is one of the treasures of English literature. It is said that it was Steele who invented Sir Roger de Coverley, although Addison continued his history and doings.

Dr. Samuel Johnson and David Garrick were at school together at Lichfield, but Johnson was a big lad when David was a little one. But as Johnson used to go a great deal to the house of Captain Garrick, David's father, he and the smaller boy were great friends, and so they remained to the last day. Garrick was also one of Johnson's three pupils when, for a time, he tried to keep school. They went to London together, but while the greater man was starving in Grub street the great actor was playing to kings and princes, and making as much money as he could wish.

The record of school friendships is glorified by Lamb and Coleridge, who were at the "Blue-coat School" for seven years. There commenced that friendship which only terminated with death, and, singularly enough, they died in the self-same year, 1834. It is said that Coleridge used to meet Lamb about the Temple, seize him by one of the buttons of his coat, shut his eyes, and begin one of his marvellous monologues. Lamb generally listened patiently, but having an appointment one day he gently cut off the button, and when he returned that way an hour later found Coleridge still spouting.

A remarkable friendship was that between Thackeray and Venables, inasmuch as it was the latter who, in a school scrap, broke the future novelist's nose, an accident which marked him for life, and of which he speaks in several of his books, notably in "Vanity Fair" and "The Newcomes." In spite of this, Venables and Thackeray remained the best of friends until the novelist's death.

The historic literary friendship of Tennyson and Arthur Hallam began at Trinity College, Cambridge. Each was in his nineteenth year. Later Hallam went with his chum down to Lincolnshire, where he was introduced to the poet's sister, to whom he became engaged, and where he died, and Tennyson was inconsolable. From time to time for years he jotted down his thoughts in lovely lyrics. These he called "In Memoriam," but the poem was not published until eighteen years after his friend's death. It is one of the greatest poems of the century.

Fat Men's Funny Fixes

Stories of Predicaments from Excessive Size

WHEN traveling by train from Danzig to Berlin, General von Podbielski, popularly known as "Pod," was undressed as usual by his valet Heinrich, who, having packed away his master's clothes in a suit case, so that the sleeping compartment should not be unnecessarily overcrowded, removed them to his own carriage. Next morning when the general awoke and summoned Heinrich to assist him with his toilet, he discovered, to his consternation, that the compartment in which his valet was keeping watch over his clothes had during the night been detached, and was at that very moment speeding toward the Russian frontier, 500 miles away.

WIRED FOR AN AMBULANCE

Here, indeed, was an awkward dilemma, for the sleeping-car attendant's anxious inquiry among the other passengers failed to procure any habiliments with waist-girth approaching the required 52 inch. But "Pod" is a man of resource. He wired to the Friedrichstrasse station, Berlin, for a Red Cross ambulance to meet the train on arrival, and into this, wrapped only a blanket, he in due course clambered, and was borne to a neighboring hotel, whither were promptly summoned a tailor, hosier, bootmaker and hatter, who soon made the gallant soldier sartorially presentable.

Alexander Dumas, the famous French romancist, was as reckless as extravagant as he was abnormally stout, and more than once found himself in awkward straits. Indeed, he was often enough without the commonest necessaries even of dress, as when, anxious to attend an ambassador's reception, he discovered he was without a single clean shirt among his linen. A friend, who chanced to be with him at the time, volunteered to go and buy one, only to find that none of the shops had in stock a garment sufficiently large to encircle the novelist's generous girth of neck and chest.

At last, when on the point of relinquishing his search, Dumas' friend came upon a shop where a shirt called "The Hercules" was advertised. The name struck him as being one of good omen, and he entered. But, alas! they had nothing approaching the size required, unless, indeed, their customer would care to take one made to the order of a very corpulent Guardsman, and, as it happened, one had been left on their hands. Although covered with little red devils caressing about in red flames, it was the case of Hobson's choice, so the shirt was purchased and taken home to Dumas, who, doubtless entering into the humor of the situation, resolved to wear it at the reception. "You would hardly believe it," he said afterward, "but my costume was an immense success, and I really think I have started a fashion of devilled shirts for evening wear."

FRAGILE FOUR-WHEELERS.

One afternoon Signor Lablache, the celebrated basso, a man of enormous proportion, on leaving Covent Garden Theatre after rehearsal, found that his carriage had not arrived, so he sent for a four-wheeler. Into this, after a strenuous effort, he managed to squeeze his massive body, to find himself seated on the edge of the smaller seat—a truly uncomfortable position, which it was imperative at once to change. As he struggled to his feet in his attempt to do so, the bottom of the vehicle gave way, and the artist found himself standing in the road. Help, however, was at hand, and he was released with no small difficulty from his ridiculous dilemma.

A similar adventure befell the brothers Ingo—one a doctor, the other a barrister—who between them weighed over 400 pounds, when crossing Waterloo Bridge in London in a four-wheeled cab. How it happened is uncertain, but about the centre of the bridge the floor of the cab collapsed, and for the next thirty yards two pairs of sturdy legs straining to keep pace with the horse's mild amble, was a spectacle for unrestrained mirth. Cabby soon pulled up, and eager hands quickly extricated the obese and exhausted brothers.

A Heavenly Idea

A lady of Somerset bewailed the loss of a somewhat ill-bred but extremely wealthy neighbor, who had been very liberal in his help to her country charities.

"Mr. X—— is dead," said she. "He was so good and kind and helpful to me in all sorts of ways. He was so vulgar, poor, dear fellow, we would not know him in London, but we shall meet in heaven."

Their Married Life

Helen Misses a Train and Warren Is Correspondingly Angry

Copyright, 1913, by International News Service.

"AND for heaven's sake, don't be late whatever you do," admonished Warren as he left Helen standing on a corner of the crooked street. They had come to Panama City early that morning, and as Warren had some business in Balboa he had agreed to leave Helen in Panama City to shop.

Helen walked slowly down the street, stopping every now and then to examine the different shop windows. The shops in Panama City were much more Americanized than those in Colon, and Helen needed several things she had not been able to purchase in Colon.

With a glance at her watch she saw that she had nearly three hours till train time, and she went on her errands accordingly, taking plenty of time to look at things as she walked from shop to shop.

She needed a couple of fresh shirt-waists and selected some very pretty ones in one of the shops when she saw some pretty hats. One, a little white one, swirled with white wings, was very smart, and Helen asked the man to take it out of the case for her. The price was more than she had wanted to pay, and she did not really need the hat, but then she had not bought a Panama, finding that they were much more expensive than they were in the city, and so felt entitled to a hat of some kind.

"I didn't want to pay that much," she explained to the man who was waiting on her.

"But it is worth it, madam; genuine hemp and faced with velvet."

So it was. Helen had not noticed that before. Well, at any rate, she would try it on. She pulled off her little blue suit hat and tried on the white one. It really was becoming, but she hesitated, she really hated to be extravagant.

"All right, I'll take it," she said after a few seconds of doubt, and she waited while the man made a neat package of some other purchases she had made, wrapping them all up together.

She was a little hungry and wondered if she had time to go up to the hotel for some breakfast. They had eaten so very early and some hot coffee would taste good.

SHE ORDERS A BOUNTIFUL BREAKFAST AT LEISURE

On the way to the hotel she decided that she had about an hour to eat, certainly plenty of time, and she ordered a bountiful breakfast in the great cool dining room, scrambled eggs and rolls and coffee, and some pancakes and maple syrup.

She breathed a little as she thought what Warren would say if he could see how she proceeded with her breakfast with a good appetite. Everything was delicious and she ate as though she had had nothing at all that morning. By the time she was ready to leave the hotel she still had three-quarters of an hour till the time Warren had asked her to meet him, and she decided to go hang down town and buy some silk stockings.

The carriage drove her down slowly and when she came out she hailed another one to drive down to the station. The horse acted very peculiarly as she was about to climb into the carriage, and after they had started he began to kick and finally refused to go at all.

Helen sat still a moment, and then informed the driver that she had to catch a train and would have to call another carriage. The driver objected strenuously as she climbed down, but she paid no attention to him, and as there were plenty of carriages in the street, she was soon in another one hurrying to the station. But the first driver, who had finally induced his horse to go, was after them in a minute and almost before she knew it, Helen found herself stopped by one of the mounted native police while the coacher told the story in some kind of patois.

"Let me explain," said Helen finally and the man turned to her willingly enough. The story seemed to satisfy him, but the driver demanded his money vociferously.

"But I won't pay him," Helen protested. "I didn't drive more than a few feet in his carriage."

There was some more altercation and finally Helen was allowed to drive off.

WARREN WAITING A PICTURE OF DISGUST

"Do you think we can make it," she said imploringly to the driver, who accordingly whipped up his horse. But just as they rounded the corner, the train pulled out of the station.

Warren was standing on the platform, his face a picture of disgust, and, to make matters worse, a second later the driver with the emaciated horse appeared upon the scene with another attempt to get his money.

"We've missed the train: I suppose you know that," Warren said furiously. "I said in the beginning it was a fool stunt shopping in Panama."

"But, dear," said Helen, trying to explain, "this man has been trying to arrest me.' At that moment the station official came up, and the same story had to be gone through again.

"Pay the man, can't you let him?" said Helen appealingly. "It was the principle of the thing, and I thought I could make it."

Warren turned away, a smile twitching at the corners of his mouth.

"You know what it is to miss a train down here?" he said, accusingly.

"You know what I'm like, Warren, if you had been in my place what would you have done?"

"I don't know. It's hard to tell."

"Would you have paid him?"

"No, but I believe I would have as it happens there is another train in an hour, but I suppose, if there hadn't been one, till tomorrow, you would have missed it just the same."

"But so would you, dear," said Helen, sweetly, "you admitted it just now." And Warren grinned as he pulled out a cigar and lighted it.

(Another incident in this series will appear here soon.)

Behind the Bars

The Sunday was a wet one and she was allowed to accompany her parents to church.

It was her first experience of that kind.

The minister was of the energetic, pulpit-thumping type, and he preached from a rostrum railed in, above the people.

He excelled himself this day in the thumping tactics and had worked himself up to a pitch of high excitement.

Esther was cowering close to her mother's side, and when he reached a point which he emphasized more than all the others, she exclaimed, in a frightened whisper:

"Mal what would we do if he got out?"

FIRST SERIES "B" COUPON--
THE BIG 10-VOTE--IN TOMORROW'S SUNDAY AMERICAN

Candidates in the American's California Tour Contest—get ready!

Tomorrow's the Day!

Victory or defeat for you will depend largely upon whether you recognize the necessity of getting a flying start on the first coupon in Series "B," which appears in tomorrow's Sunday American.

And it's the big 10-vote coupon, too. Don't forget that, candidates!

Every one should realize by this time that it's "the consecutive plan" of vote-saving which will return twenty-five candidates as the final winners of the marvelous trips to the Pacific coast.

Did you ever try to save money? Have you ever noticed how easy it is to put a little cash away in a Savings Bank each week but how frightfully hard it is to catch up if you break the regularity of your savings?

And so it is with the collection of these all-important 10-vote coupons. By working systematically and steadily you will be astonished at the size of the vote total you and your friends will roll up to your credit.

Every candidate should instantly realize that the thing to do TODAY is to get out among your friends, relatives and acquaintances—strangers, even—and ask each and every one of them to promise to get the Sunday and Daily American for the next fifteen days (Series "B") and to turn over to you, at the end of that time, one full set of Series "B" coupons, consecutively numbered, and as many other sets as they can possibly get for you.

That's the way to win! And tomorrow is the time to begin it!

Just do a little figuring for yourselves, candidates. Look at your April calendar and you will see that Series "B" begins tomorrow, Sunday, April 11, and ends two weeks from tomorrow, Sunday, April 25. This brings three of the big 10-vote coupons in Series "B" and twelve of the one vote daily coupons, a total value of forty-two consecutive votes in Series "B." Now just DOUBLE that forty-two, and you will find that for each and every friend who saves you one consecutive set of coupons during Series "B" you will get EIGHTY-FOUR VOTES. If you have 10, or 20, or 30 friends, or possibly more, just multiply in your properties, and see what a splendid opportunity you have IF YOU WILL ONLY GET A FLYING START TOMORROW.

Tomorrow's Sunday American shall also contain a complete list of all candidates.

So, candidates, let this fact sink in: "TOMORROW'S SUNDAY AMERICAN MAY BE THE TURNING POINT OF THE CONTEST FOR ME BECAUSE:

THE FIRST SERIES "B" COUPON WILL APPEAR TOMORROW.

THE BIG 10-VOTE COUPON WILL APPEAR TOMORROW.

A FULL LIST OF CANDIDATES WILL APPEAR TOMORROW."

The thing for you to do from now until the shades of Sunday Evening begin to fall is, as Billy Sundays says, to "hit the trail" and gather every one of the big 10-vote coupons in tomorrow's Sunday American that you can possibly collect.

Contest Rules
Read Carefully

THE CONTEST—The Boston American's California Expositions Contest is a voting competition which is open to every man, woman and child (over 16 years of age) in New England, except employes of the American and their families and relatives. The contest begins Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ends Saturday, July 3, 1915.

THE PRIZES—Twenty-five De Luxe trips to the California Expositions and FIFTY-FIVE CASH PRIZES in gold, one for each of the candidates to be awarded.

THE CANDIDATES—Every man, woman or child (over 16 years of age), who is a resident of New England, is eligible to compete, except employes of the American as noted above. Participation in any previous American contest does not disqualify.

THE ENROLLMENT—Every candidate must be regularly enrolled from his or her permanent address on the enrollment blank printed in the Boston American Daily and Sunday or a copy thereof.

THE VOTES—Every day during the life of the contest, beginning Saturday, March 27, 1915, and ending Saturday, July 3, 1915, a coupon will appear in the Daily and Sunday American in which will count ONE vote.

The Daily American coupon will count ONE vote, and the Sunday American coupon will count 10 votes.

The contest will be divided into 7 periods, and the coupons, during each period, will be numbered in series as follows:

1st period—Series A No. 1 to A No. 15—appearing March 27 to April 10
2d period—Series B No. 1 to B No. 15—appearing April 11 to April 25
3d period—Series C No. 1 to C No. 15—appearing April 26 to May 10
4th period—Series D No. 1 to D No. 15—appearing May 11 to May 25
5th period—Series E No. 1 to E No. 15—appearing May 26 to June 9
6th period—Series F No. 1 to F No. 15—appearing June 10 to June 24
7th period—Series G No. 1 to G No. 9—appearing June 25 to July 3

DOUBLE VOTE VALUE will be given for each consecutive SERIES turned in within one week after the appearance of the last coupon in each SERIES. For example, a set of (a) coupons numbered "Series A, No. 1" to "Series A, No. 15" inclusive will count as 60 votes, if received in one package as directed below, whereas if (b) daily and 5 Sunday coupons bearing consecutively numbered will count as only 10 votes (their face value). But in any event all the coupons must be turned in within the time limit. For example: ALL (a) coupons must be turned in not later than 5 P. M., April 17. ALL (b) coupons received after this date and time will be refused; a similar rule applies to the other six SERIES.

Votes must be daily and each period will count only for their face value.

Votes cannot be transferred from one contestant to another after receipt same by the American.

The vote value of coupons will remain unchanged throughout the entire contest.

HOW TO SEND VOTE COUPONS—At the end of each contest period, collect all votes of that particular series, as, for example, Series A No. 1 to coupons together, tie or fasten them in one manner and attach a slip of paper showing the number of votes, and mail or express them in one flat package. Do the same with "Series A No. 2" coupons, and the same with Series A No. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, and so on up to and including "Series A No. 15," the last one of that series. Then wrap them all in one bundle and write or stamp the address outside of the bundle, "Coupons enclosed." The number of consecutive sets said to be contained therein.

WHERE TO SEND THE VOTES—Address them to the Expositions Contest Headquarters at No. 5 Winthrop square (just around the corner from the American's main office at Summer and Devonshire streets), or, if sent by mail, send to American Expositions Contest, P. O. Box 3047, Boston, Mass.

THE WINNERS—The candidates who receive the largest number of votes will be awarded the 25 prizes. In the event of total votes for any contestant, ants who win being awarded similar prizes will be given each winner so tied.

SPECIAL NOTICE—The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any packages unless sent by registered mail or express.

No persons can win more than one prize.

The American reserves the right to amend these rules and conditions from time to time, if it may seem necessary, in order to protect all contestants from any possible contingency which may arise. The Contest Editor will decide all disputed questions carefully and in good faith, and his decisions will be final and conclusive.

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks opened strong in both New York and Boston and at the end of half an hour almost all important issues were showing good gains, although a number of Curb Market were active as well as strong. Yesterday twenty leading railroads showed an average gain of 2.14 points and twelve industrials a gain of 2.76. When trading was resumed there was no reaction.

In New York after fifteen minutes of trading gains included Amalgamated L. American Smelting 1¾, American Sugar 1½, Atchison 1¾, Baltimore & Ohio 1⅜, Canadian Pacific 2, Lehigh Valley 3, Missouri Pacific ¾, New York Central 1½, New Haven 1⅛, Northern Pacific ⅝, Reading 2⅜, Southern Pacific ⅝, Steel ⅝, Union Pacific 1⅝, U. S. Steel ⅝, Utah Copper ⅞, Western Union 1¼, Mexican Petroleum 2⅝, Rock Island 5⅛, U. S. Rubber 1⅛ and Wabash-Overland 2. Bethlehem Steel sold off 1 at 134.

There was great excitement on the New York Exchange when it opened. Trading in U. S. Steel at the start amounted to 15,000 shares at from 79 to 79½.

Among early advances in Boston were Alaska Gold 1⅛, Boston & Maine ⅝, Calumet & Arizona ⅝, Copper Range 1¼, Granby 1, North Butte ⅝, New Haven ⅝, United Fruit ⅝, U. S. Smelting ¼ and Shoe Machinery ¼.

Secretary of the Interior Lane, back in Washington after traveling for three weeks to the Pacific Coast and Alaska, says the country's affairs will not be an idle man in this country among those who want to work."

COPPER STILL RISING.

The price of copper is still going up. One of the largest selling agencies has advanced its prices for electrolytic to 14¼ cents a pound. Domestic demand for the metal is readily absorbing all offerings. Operations are being extended. Producers expect that 1915 operations will be very profitable. The Chino Copper Company has reported for last year a net profit of $2,252,579. In 1914 it produced 53,999,925 pounds of copper at a cost of 7.33 cents a pound. It got for it 12.325 cents a pound, or $7,947,197. Its dividend distributions amounted to $2,189,000.

AMERICANS IN LONDON.

It is cabled from London that the activity and strength of the New York market yesterday had a very favorable effect upon American stocks in the London market today. "United States Steel, rails, metals and other shares in the group followed," it is stated, "Gains of 1 and 2 points were numerous."

Since prices began to move upward in New York, London has been slow to follow. The volume of business on the New York Exchange yesterday was the greatest known in four years, except on July 29 last, when a war panic sent prices towards the cellar and markets were closed to prevent a financial collapse. The high record for transactions in stocks is 1,391,238 shares and was established on April 20, 1903.

EXCHANGE SEATS HIGHER.

The valuation of seats on the New York Stock Exchange is also something which plainly indicates belief that trading in stocks is going to be on a large scale. A seat on the floor was paid for a seat. This was $500 more than was paid for a seat on Saturday, the last day of trading, and is not many months since it was predicted that the stock market would never "come back." But it has already.

Fires at Quarries Drawn and Pits May Fill During Strike

BARRE, Vt., April 10.—Quarry owners are now drawn the fires from the engines used to pump water from the quarries. The pits will be allowed to fill unless an early adjustment of the strike situation is reached.

The quarrymen say their action is a result of the failure of the granite cutting contractors and unions of employes to agree on a new working schedule.

Rule Lorimer Must Stand Trial on Bank Wrecking Charge

CHICAGO, April 10.—William Lorimer, former United States Senator, and other officials of the defunct La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank, must stand trial on State charges of conspiracy to wreck the institution. This was the effect of a decision in the Criminal Court, by which a motion to quash the indictment was overruled.

These Pigs Work for Their Food

A Philosopher Explains It, Preaching a Lesson to the Rich and Idle, and Interesting Farmers

Copyright, 1915, by the Star Company.

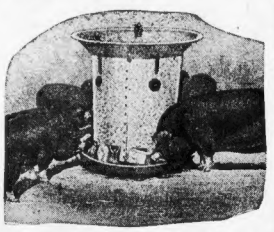
Learn how pigs, usually idle and not healthy, can be taught to work for their living, get fatter on less grain, and avoid ill-health.

The philosopher who manages the Automatic Pig Feeding Machine is one of the attractions at the Exposition in San Francisco. And he holds his own, competing with the wonderful Tower of Jewels glistening in the sun and in the star light, the great courts, the vast crowds, the mountains, the bay, the ocean, and the other marvels of the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

Don't fail to visit the pig philosopher under his little shed, down near the Presidio, where Uncle Sam keeps his big Pacific Ocean guns ready for hostile ships.

You see a compactly built, barrel-shaped concern about four feet high. Observe the little picture in this column—on top a wide platter holds the grain that the hogs eat.

This is the machine that makes pigs earn their living. Who will invent such a machine for our IDLE rich?



Below are wooden projections. The pigs move them with their snouts.

As they move these projections, they turn the barrel. The machinery within grinds the grain, corn, barley, etc. The ground food comes out in small quantitities, and the pigs gratefully eat it.

Listen now to the philosopher, fixing his light blue eyes upon you, and holding you more firmly than the ancient mariner held the wedding guest:

"Mister, take this pamphlet. Read it from end to end and take it to heart.

"Hogs are like you and most of us. They eat too much and work too little.

"And they eat too fast, especially when it is easy to get the food.

"When they eat too fast and work too little, they don't digest it, and one-third of what they eat is lost, not turned into pork.

"The great problem is to make hogs work for a living, so that they will be healthy, and yet not make them work so hard as to ruin their health, and make them thin."

(Here we interrupt the philosopher to observe that the problem so well described for hogs is the problem for humans. How can we make them work hard enough to keep them healthy and earn what they get, yet not make them work so hard that life is a horror.)

Now the philosopher once more.

"What's that you ask, do the hogs know right away how to use this machine and grind their corn?

"Say, Mister, please don't expect them hogs to know more than you know. They have to get an education, the same as you did. But luckily, hogs learn quicker than men do. At the end of two days these hogs know perfectly well how to grind this corn and to get what they want.

"First you grind it for them, and put it on top already ground. All they have to do then is to give the machine a touch with their nose and the grain comes down. Little by little they find out that it doesn't come down unless they push hard. Then they push. The pushing grinds the corn, and makes the grain come to them very slowly. It gives them exercise at the end of the nose as Nature intended them to get it. You are supposed to work with your brain. A hog is supposed to work with the end of his nose.

"Don't forget that a hog can work this machine even after you have ringed him.

"You know the rings are put in hogs' noses to keep them from rooting too much. A hog soon learns to work this machine with the side of his nose, and not hurt himself by butting against the ring. Few men are as intelligent as hogs, as I said to you in the beginning.

"We save one-third of the feed by this method.

"It keeps the hogs healthy—they work. All things need to work, which proves Divine wisdom.

"On the ordinary farm, some man or woman has to grind the feed for the hogs. Here the hog grinds the feed for himself, instead of having it done for him. And that is a mighty good thing."

(We interrupted the philosopher here to observe that, among human beings, if you suggest that each "hog" be compelled to grind and earn his own food, you are called a socialist.)

The philosopher says:

"Slow eating is the great thing. If you give a hog all he can swallow, as fast as he likes, he doesn't know when he has enough. But if he has to work for it, he comes out here, roots at this machine for awhile, swallows a cupful, goes back in there, lies down, and digests it carefully. He doesn't eat too much when he has to work for what he eats. And he digests it better.

"The nation is going to be made happier by the machine that I have the honor to offer you."

What law-giver will do for human beings what this philosopher has done for hogs?

P. S.—As soon as you have read this, make your plans to visit the great Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco.

You will find interesting little things, like this philosopher who makes the pigs work. You will see the great wonders of the Exposition gathered from all over the world, marvellous buildings that have never been equalled. And, above all, you will see your country going and coming.

Remember that travel across the Continent is cheaper now than it will be for many years. Living in San Francisco costs very little. You can get an excellent bedroom for one dollar; a good room and bath for one dollar and a half. What you eat is very reasonable in price.

To stay at home is false economy, when everything is planned for you to see thousands of miles of your own country, and the most wonderful Exposition that the world has ever seen, all in one journey.

[This editorial is published in all of the Hearst newspapers. Editors of other newspapers who think their readers might be interested in the great Panama Exposition held in San Francisco, or who think it desirable to encourage American citizens to travel to the great Exposition and see this nation, may reproduce this editorial, or any part of it.]

Inklings and Thinklings

By WEX JONES

Life's mysteries: Parsley on a restaurant dish.

Safe conversational opening: "How is your grippe today?"

Horrors of war: William Watson's "poems."

Copper growing scarce.—Headline. How do you grow copper?

Finderne Fayne sounds like the heroine of a comic opera, but it's really something more important—the New Jersey cow which busted all records for milk production. A name of poetic stimulus:

Oh, Jersey's vain
Of Finderne Fayne;
All other cows
Give her a pain.

Dr. Wiley, the pure food expert, comes out in favor of a "safe and sane kiss." Stick to pure food, doctor; a kiss that was safe and sane wouldn't be worth stealing.

Don't see why there's so much fuss over "getting a laugh with every dollar bill," now that they are to be signed by a man named Teehee. Even without his name there wasn't a frown in a million of 'em.

Costs the battleship Queen Elizabeth $1,250,000 an hour to shoot off all her guns. Too bad it didn't cost some persons the same price to shoot off their mouths.

Of the fourteen billion phone calls in the United States last year, it is estimated that seven billion were from husbands explaining why they'd have to work late in the office.

Says a sociologist (whatever that is), "Every engaged girl should study the business or profession of the man she expects to marry." After she had mastered her suitor's business, what would be the use of marrying—she could go out and get the kale herself.

"GET UP, JACK; JOHN, SIT DOWN!"

Introducing a Few Rambling Remarks on the Passing of an Old, and the Arrival of a New, Champion of the World; on the Fact That the Sunday AMERICAN Will Offer a Series of Copyright and Exclusive Photographs of the Engagement Last Monday in Havana, and on the Additional and Equally Important Fact That a Sure Remedy Has Been Found for the Old Complaint That "This" Town—ANY Town—Is DULL ON SUNDAY.

A generation ago—well, it may have been a LITTLE longer: time flies, as the fellow said when the thief ran away with the clock—there was a popular song called "Get Up, Jack; John, Sit Down." Ask your Daddy about it.

Truly, brethern, a fickle world.

Think, for example, of the living men who, famous and exalted ten or fifteen years ago in city, State or nation, are today quite forgotten except by their families, their servants, their grocers, their bootmakers and, we trust, their pastors.

One week ago today the most terrible instrument of war in the possession of the armies of the Allies in Europe was called by the soldiers the "Jack Johnson." Why? Because, as an instrument of war, as the last word in fighting, the "Jack Johnson" had no superior.

Along about the middle of the afternoon, five days ago, the boys in the trenches in northeastern France heard the news from the race track at Havana, on the Island of Cuba, and in sixty seconds flat, according to the correspondents, there was no such gun in the world as the "Jack Johnson." What had become of them? They were now the "Jess Willards."

"The King is dead; long live the King."

"Get up, Jack; John, sit down."

Ten thousand people saw last Monday's battle at the race track in Havana, between black giant and white gladiator. The President of the Cuban Republic sat among them. In the United States ten thousand times ten thousand men will take advantage of the first opportunity to see and cheer the conquering Kansan Willard is the idol of the hour. In Boston, you will see boys and young men trooping after him in the streets, from exhibition hall to theatre and back again.

You may have seen Gibson's celebrated drawing—true to life—"The Champion." Who WAS the Champion in the Gibson drawing? Who will be the GIBSON, three champions from now?

Thanks to a marvel of invention unknown to the world in the Heenan-Sayers, Mitchell-Sullivan, Sullivan-Corbett days, EVERY BLOW exchanged by the black and the white at Havana last Monday has been recorded by PHOTOGRAPHY. All the world over men will see MOVING pictures of the great battle between Johnson and Willard. In the United States, these pictures may NOT be shown publicly; nothing can prevent their exhibition privately. One way or another, Americans WILL see them.

Readers of the Sunday AMERICAN, however, will not be obliged to wait for Willard to come to Boston. Readers of the Sunday AMERICAN need not be disturbed by the discussion now going on regarding the LEGAL standing of the fight "movies."

The Johnson-Willard battle at Havana last Monday will be reproduced in the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow in the form of copyrighted and exclusive photographs, TAKEN ON THE SPOT AND NOT TO BE SHOWN IN ANY OTHER NEWSPAPER HEREABOUTS.

We call PUBLIC attention to these Sunday AMERICAN photographs of the Johnson-Willard engagement because their reproduction in the Sunday AMERICAN adds one more to the ACCOMPLISHMENTS of the Sunday AMERICAN. Everybody in New England who acknowledges an interest in the "fight game," everybody in New England who threw his hat up last Monday and expressed his delight that Willard had won, everybody in New England who wants to know EXACTLY HOW IT HAPPENED should be sure to have tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. To be CERTAIN of a copy, we respectfully advise a word betimes to your regular newsdealer. The saddest words heard in New England are those which greet the thoughtless man who, having slept until late, asks for a Sunday AMERICAN and hears the report of the newsdealer: "All sold out!"

The Sunday AMERICAN as usual will be RICH in features. Julian Hawthorne, distinguished son of a famous father, tells how Boston strikes the man who returns AFTER FORTY YEARS. Always interesting, Mr. Hawthorne in his first of a series of New England stories is nothing short of captivating. Read what he says in praise of our crooked streets, as compared to the level avenues of "mathematical" towns.

"If You Had a Million Dollars" is the subject of one of the most readable and most helpful full-page editorials the Sunday AMERICAN has printed in a long time.

De Wolf Hopper's Baby, the Jitney Bus in Providence, Billy Sunday's Ten Commandments, the New Peek-a-Boo Parasols and the New Peek-a-Boo Hats, these are the subjects of Sunday AMERICAN stories which will attract, inform, amuse or entertain.

Do YOU complain that "THIS" town—wherever you may be—is "FRIGHTFULLY DULL ON SUNDAY?"

Prescription: Have in the Sunday AMERICAN, New England's greatest and best Sunday newspaper.

THE SELFISH HEART

I HAVE not room for many, only one;
To him belong my heart, my dreams, my smile,
And all myself, that, after all is done,
Are his for such a very little while.

I cannot laugh with many, it is strange
How close I keep my thoughts, yet while I live
I am content to have it so, nor change
So that I daily may have more to give.
